RUSSIA is a country bigger than ours, and probably, at least as rich in resources. But wealth means nothing, unless you have men that know how to get it out, use it and multiply it. Remember that, if inclined to criticize the very rich.

The man who can say, "dig there, and you will find gold—or coal," is at least as important as the man that digs.

Russia's national income for six months is $850,000,000. That would not be a financial flea bite, in this favored land. We have the stuff in the ground, and the mines, and the men, machinery and brains that know how to get it out.

Russia will have that also, and when she gets rich, she will become conservative—that is how human nature works, from Nijni-Novgorod to Broad and Wall streets.

Our shivering financiers that nag and hinder Russia are doing exactly what they don't want to do, keeping Russia radical. Help the Russians to make a few billion roubles more each year, and you will see Soviet red change to delicate pink, then fade to a dull gold.

That Governor Martin has rendered great service to Florida in financing $10,000,000 of everglades drainage is shown by S. Davies Warfield, president of the Seaboard Railway, who assisted in negotiating the financing with Dillion, Read, Eldredge and Company.

This drainage will dispose of surplus waters from Lake Okechobee, and open to agricultural development 4,000,000 acres of the most wonderfully fertile land on earth, lying along the southeastern crest of Florida, and the Saint Lucie Canal, as far east as Stuart.

In Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, on a Sunday morning, long ago, Henry Ward Beecher presented a young negro slave girl to his congregation, and proceeded to sell her at public auction, asking for gifts totalling $900, the sum necessary to buy the girl's freedom.

Beecher imitated the manner and speech of a slave auctioneer and more than $900 was raised. Rose Terry, a writer, put a valuable ring in the plate, and Beecher, putting it on the girl's finger, said "with this ring I thee wed—to freedom."

Beecher is dead, but the good work that he did lives on. And next Sunday morning, when Plymouth Church celebrates its eightieth anniversary, the former slave girl, sold at public auction in that church, will be present, a happy old grandmother, married to

Review-Tribune Offers Booklet On Etiquette

How many of these questions on etiquette can you answer? Does a divorcee continue to use her husband's name?

Are invitations ever written on visiting cards?

What do the letters P. P. C. mean when they appear on a visiting card?

Where should a woman sit in a motor or carriage having a driver?

When do persons shake hands?

Should one always be announced when calling on a person living in an apartment house?

Is a "party call" still considered obligatory?

How are artichokes eaten?

Should a hostess wait an indefinite time for all the guests to arrive for dinner?

RUTH SNYDER IS PENITENT, SAYS CHAPLAIN

Condemned Slayer of Husband Has Not Embraced Religion.

GRAY CONTRITE

Sashweight Murderers are Ready for Trip "Up River."

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., May 14.—Ruth Brown Snyder, who on Monday will be taken in shackles to the death house in Sing Sing has developed "a profound sense of penitence," the Rev. Patrick Murphy, Roman Catholic chaplain, said today after visiting her.

She has not, however, embraced religion as strongly as has her one-time sweetheart, Henry Judd Gray, who also makes the trip "up the river" on Monday. In fact, she confided to one inmate in the Queens county jail that she fears no church nor God can ever forgive her for her sins.

Gray spends much of his time in his cell on his knees. He assures all those who talk to him that he has "made his peace with God."

He will go to Sing Sing absolutely penniless, having signed over everything to his wife. He issued a statement from his cell warning young men to beware of rum and women, saying: "I am one of the best examples of what whisky, lust and sin will ultimately lead one into."

Woman Will Appeal Case.

The condemned woman still clings to the hope expressed by her counsel that she can "beat the sentence and the electric chair." The appeal of her case is expected to be based principally on the court's refusal to grant her a separate trial. Lawyers said that Justice Townsend Scudder's refusal to grant separate trials in the case of Mrs. Snyder and Gray was the first time a court had availed itself of that part of the Baumes laws giving a judge discretionary powers.

COUNTY FIELD MEET POSTPONED

Because of rain and a muddy track, the county high school field meet at Lisbon today was postponed until 2 p. m. Tuesday.

Washington Announces That Proposal to Send Dirigible to Labrador is Not Feasible.

STORMS DELAY YANKEE AIRMEN

Three Planes are Groomed for Hop-off in Nonstop Race to Span Atlantic Ocean.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The government virtually abandoned today the search for the Nungesser-Coli trans-Atlantic flyers.

Dense fog over the upper Atlantic convinced naval officers that further search of the water was futile, and navy ships accordingly were ordered back. Similar action is expected by the coast guard.

Shortage of Helium.

At the same time it was announced at the navy department that the proposal to send the dirigible Los Angeles to the bleak Labrador coast is not feasible, and has been abandoned. The principal difficulty was said to be a shortage of helium. The Labrador trip would entail about 2,400 miles.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 14.—A report was received here today from a lumber camp in the woods of Mount Uniacke district, north of this city, that the sound of a powerful engine was heard over the camp about 10:40 o'clock Monday night.

Parties searching for traces of the French aviators, Nungesser and Coli, who have been missing since their attempted Paris-to-New York flight, took cognizance of the report. Several other similar reports have been received from outlying districts in this section of the country.

According to the lumbermen the noise of the engine ended abruptly as though it had "gone dead." When word of the missing fliers reached the lumber camp the men reported the incident, believing that the noise they heard was that of an airplane and might have been the missing "White Bird."

MINEOLA, N. Y., May 14.—Storms and fog over the North Atlantic today held up the American airmen who will attempt the 2,600 mile non-stop flight from New York to Paris. Indications were that the bad weather may last for at least 18 hours.

Clarence D. Chamberlin, Lloyd Bertaud and Commander Richard E. Byrd are awaiting patiently, but not so Capt. Charles Lindbergh, the restless young sky pilot, who dropped in from San Diego, Calif., to compete in the big trans-Atlantic hop. Lindbergh is anxious to get away. He flew across one continent to make the New York-Paris jump and he is chafing under the delay imposed by adverse weather. He is chagrined that a little thing like a storm and fog should interfere with a flight over the ocean.

The three planes of the flyers—"Columbia," "American" and "Spirit of St. Louis"—are all groomed for the flight, but the "America" will require some more testing before Commander Byrd will be satisfied to undertake the big hop.

L. M. THOMAS, 73, DIES SUDDENLY ON SOJOURN IN MT. DORA, FLA.

President of R. Thomas and Sons' Porcelain Company.

PIONEER HERE

Death Occurs as he Prepares to Return Home.

Lawrence M. Thomas, 73, president of the R. Thomas & Sons' company, electric porcelain manufacturers, and one of East Liverpool's pioneer ceramic manufacturers, died suddenly in his summer home in Mt. Dora, Florida, at 10 o'clock this morning of heart disease.

Mr. Thomas, who had been in Florida since November 1, 1926, succumbed as he was about to return to East Liverpool. His wife and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Barnhart, the latter a niece of Mrs. Thomas, were in Florida when his death occurred.

He was born in East Liverpool March 30, 1854, a son of Richard Thomas, who founded the R. Thomas Sons' company in 1873. The plant originally engaged in the manufacture of door knobs, having but one kiln. The company, incorporated in 1892 with the late George W. Thomas as president, L. M. Thomas, vice president and treasurer, and A. W. Thomas, secretary, operates plants here and in Lisbon.

Lawrence M. Thomas became head of the company upon the death of his brother, George R. Thomas, on August 7, 1921. He was succeeded as vice-president by his nephew, G. Richard Thomas.

Mr. Thomas, who resided at 227 Seventh street, had spent his winters in Florida for the last 28 years. He was active in the management of the business of the company until he went to the south last fall.

Member of Methodist Church.

Besides his widow, he is survived by two brothers, Charles R. and Atwood W. Thomas, of East Liverpool, and three sisters, Mrs. A. G. Mason, Lisbon; Mrs. George B. Harvey, Providence Forge, Va., and Mrs. C. E. Bradshaw, Youngstown.

He was a member and trustee of the First Methodist Episcopal church.

The body was to leave Florida today and will arrive in East Liverpool, Tuesday morning.

Automobile Thief Routed by Woman; Man is Attacked

An automobile tire thief who attempt to remove the spare tire from the machine of Mrs. Lena Urie, 638 Avondale street, was routed by the woman at 1:30 o'clock this morning, according to a report made to police.

Mrs. Urie, reading in the house, heard a noise on the street where her car was parked. She stepped from the house and a man who was in the act of removing the tire from the machine, fled. Mrs. Urie said that she was attempting to adjust the tire on the back of the machine when the stranger returned. She struck at him, and the thief in an effort to get away dropped a pair of wire cutters which he had in his hand and his cap which were later turned over to the police.

An unidentified man, said to be a carpenter and who refused to divulge his name, had a similar experience with a tire thief about midnight. He said he was attracted by a man who was removing the tire from a machine parked on one of the hillside streets. He attacked him but the thief struck him over the head and fled, leaving a pair of wire cutters.

Soviet Government Drafts Protest On Raids In England

Note, Threatening Economic Reprisals, Probably Will be Delivered in London Tonight.

PLAN TO CANCEL PLACED ORDERS

Mounted Police Turn Back Mobs Attempting to Storm British Mission in Moscow.

MOSCOW, May 14. — The Soviet government is drafting a note of protest to England against the raids of the Soviet trade delegation headquarters, threatening economic reprisals, it was announced by the foreign office today.

The note probably will be delivered late this evening. It is understood that the Soviet proposes to cancel large industrial orders placed in England.

Mounted police were stationed in front of the British mission this afternoon and turned back mobs who were attemping to stage anti-English demonstrations.

The crowds assembled before the foreign office and gave vent to their wrath.

"We won't be provoked into the use of force," declared the speaker. "We call on the English proletariat to overthrow the die-hard government."

Break in Trade Relations Looms.

MOSCOW, May 14.—England will suffer more than Russia from the break in trade relations which is predicted as the result of the police raid on Soviet house in London, the official newspaper Izvestia stated today.

Izvestia states that the British government has begun a drive which will end in the breaking of relations with the Soviet union, as threatened by the last Chamberlain note to Russia. The newspaper predicts that the raids will be followed by the publication of "counterfeit documents."

"England will suffer more than Russia," said Izvestia, "since many competitors will share the Soviet market now held by England. The policy of forcing a break in relations, which the British government apparently has inaugurated, carries a threat of unheard of complications to European economic conditions and will be a public calamity. It comes at a moment when strained trade conditions between England and the Soviet union are lessening and Russia has entered the economic conference to discuss ways and means to enter world trade."

Police Search "Strong Room".

LONDON May 14.—A nine foot wall of steel and concrete guarding the Soviets' trade and diplomatic secrets in raided Soviet House yielded today to pneumatic drills, acetylene torches, picks, shovels and crow bars.

The police forced themselves into the "strong room" in continuation of

Straw Hat Season Opens Tomorrow; Panamas Popular

Tomorrow is straw hat day—the opening day of the summer headgear season.

Dealers anticipate a big rush for straws during the last two weeks in May.

"DAREDEVIL" TO DRIVE AUTO FOR 120 HOURS

Cowboy Mathews Opens Endurance Ride, Monday Night.

FIVE-DAY TEST

Police Will Handcuff Him to Hudson Coach.

Handcuffed to the wheel of a Hudson stock coach, Fred "Daredevil" Mathews, cowboy from the Rio Grande valley near San Antonio, Texas, will begin an endurance drive for five days and five nights—120 hours—here at 7 o'clock Monday evening.

Mathews' starting point will be the Buckeye Motor Sales garage at the corner of East Sixth and Walnut streets. Chief of Police Hugh McDermott will handcuff the driver's arms to the wheel of the car before he starts on his drive which is scheduled to end at 7 o'clock Saturday evening, May 21.

At no time during the period Mathews is at the wheel will the car be stopped, except for red blocks in traffic lights. He will take on gasoline and oil while the car is moving and will also obtain nourishment, consisting of milk and black coffee, while the car is slowly in motion.

Nurse Will Accompany Driver.

In the event of a punctured tire, Mathews will drive with a flat until a tire repairman meets him. The car will be jacked up upon a two-wheeled truck and the machine kept in motion while another tire is being attached. Mathews will spend the greater part of his time in East Liverpool, although he has permission to go out of the city toward Lisbon, Salem, Wellsville, Salineville, Leetonia, Midland and on other improved roads.

The car's average speed during the endurance test will be from three to 10 miles per hour. In similar drives he has traveled from 1,200 to 1,500 miles during the five day run.

The driver will be accompanied by his partner, Miss Barbara Cox, a nurse. She will be with him between 16 and 18 hours of each day. During the remainder of the trip Mathews will be alone.

Gasoline, mileage and oil used during the trip will be recorded. The gasoline and oil will be furnished by the Midway Oil company, of which George Farrall is manager.

Milk and Coffee Nourishment.

The car will be equipped with Seiberling tires, furnished by the B. & W. Rubber company, Dresden avenue. The

MAN CONVICTED IN SLAYING OF ANANIA GETS LIFE SENTENCE

Fight for New Trial May go to Supreme Court.

OFF TO PRISON

Defense Guns are Turned on Marie Chorgas.

Salvatore Rini, 22, of East Liverpool, who entered the state penitentiary at Columbus today to begin serving a life sentence for second degree murder in the death of Pasquale (Patsy) Anania, 25, of Wellsville, will carry his fight for a new trial to the supreme court, if necessary, Attorney Raymond Knepper, of Wellsville, declared last night.

Goes to Appellate Court.

Steps are expected to be taken at once to ask the appellate court to reverse the action yesterday afternoon of Judge W. F. Lones, who, after hearing arguments in common pleas court, Lisbon, overruled the defense motion to set aside the jury's verdict in the first trial.

After denying another trial, Judge Lones sentenced Rini to life imprisonment for the death of Anania, whose body, with a knife wound in the heart, was found in his (Rini's) apartment in Walnut street on last March 22.

When asked if he had anything to say as to why sentence should not be passed, Rini, sitting beside his father, Philip Rini of Wellsville, stood up and declared:

"I am innocent. Your Honor."

Attorneys Clash.

Rini was taken to prison early today, 53 days after the body of Anania was found, by Sheriff George Wright of Lisbon. His father and mother, the latter very nervous and weeping and sister said goodbye to their son and brother in the jury room in the courthouse after sentence was pronounced yesterday afternoon.

Attorney W. A. O'Grady, of Wellsville, and Prosecutor Robert M. Brookes clashed during the arguments on the defense motion for a new trial, when O'Grady charged that evidence had been suppressed in the case. O'Grady cited the fact that although money had been telegraphed to her, Rini's wife failed to appear to testify.

O'Grady also turned his guns on Mrs. Marie Chorgas, 28, of Minneapolis, Rini's sister-in-law and co-defendant, who was acquitted by the jury upon the recommendation of the state. Mrs. Chorgas, waiving her exemption as a co-defendant, testified for the prosecution, declaring Anania, in a dying whisper, said: "Sal did it."

Both O'Grady and Knepper argued

MISSISSIPPI RIVER, BREAKING THROUGH LEVEES, THREATENS SIX PARISHES AND 258,917 PERSONS

BY LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

BATON ROUGE, La., May 14.—Through at last with the feeble resistance of man-made levees, the flood waters of the Mississippi spread leisurely today over a home stretch to the Gulf of Mexico. Over the whole countryside in south central Louisiana the river has had its way, from Cairo to Cottonport.

From Cottonport to the gulf is a matter of ten days' disaster, in half a dozen rich and fertile parishes comprising a tillable area of 4,200,000 acres. Within the region resides 258,917 persons.

There are more refugees today—almost 4,000 at Marksville alone, 1,500 at Bunkie, thousands more scattered along the high ground west of the new swath marked for inundation by the crumbling of the Bayou Des Glaises levees.

More Homes Abandoned.

More homes have been abandoned, more livestock parked hopefully upon mushy levees as once again the cycle of the cravasse works itself out in a new country.

State relief headquarters here are organized to care for 100,000 more flood exiles within a fortnight. They hope but do not yet venture the unqualified assertion that this will be the end.

Another Parish Threatened.

Torrential rains in the lower valley during the last two days have forced engineers and meterologists to revise their estimates of maximum high waters between Baton Rouge and New Orleans, and three danger points along the levees south of the Old river, the last tributary, hold the dike patrols and revetment builders to their wearying labors. If the danger points hold, the greatest flood of United States history has wrought its last dramatic destruction.

If the Old river levee at Torras caves under, the undaunted residents of Pointe Coupe parish who stand today in the most northerly part of unflooded West Bank, another parish of 600 square miles and 25,000 population will go under.

That surely, say the engineers, should be the end.

Or it may be the Morgansea sector of the Mississippi levee on the west bank, 35 miles north of Baton Rouge, or at Angola, on the east bank, 60 miles north of Baton Rouge. Everything depends upon how much water is yet to roll down the main channel from the confluence of the Old, Red and Mississippi to the gulf. Because of the undeterminable elements involved in the yesterday's breaks in the bayou dikes no one will know for several days what relief has been afforded the last reaches of the Mississippi by the breaks in the last barrier.

Melville Evacuated.

Automobile Thief Routed by Woman; Man is Attacked

An automobile tire thief who attempt to remove the spare tire from the machine of Mrs. Lena Urie, 638 Avondale street, was routed by the woman at 1:30 o'clock this morning, according to a report made to police.

Mrs. Urie, reading in the house, heard a noise on the street where her car was parked. She stepped from the house and a man who was in the act of removing the tire from the machine, fled. Mrs. Urie said that she was attempting to adjust the tire on the back of the machine when the stranger returned. She struck at him, and the thief in an effort to get away dropped a pair of wire cutters which he had in his hand and his cap which were later turned over to the police.

An unidentified man, said to be a carpenter and who refused to divulge his name, had a similar experience with a tire thief about midnight. He said he was attracted by a man who was removing the tire from a machine parked on one of the hillside streets. He attacked him but the thief struck him over the head and fled, leaving a pair of wire cutters.

Soviet Government Drafts Protest On Raids In England

Note, Threatening Economic Reprisals, Probably Will be Delivered in London Tonight.

PLAN TO CANCEL PLACED ORDERS

Mounted Police Turn Back Mobs Attempting to Storm British Mission in Moscow.

MOSCOW, May 14. — The Soviet government is drafting a note of protest to England against the raids of the Soviet trade delegation headquarters, threatening economic reprisals, it was announced by the foreign office today.

The note probably will be delivered late this evening. It is understood that the Soviet proposes to cancel large industrial orders placed in England.

Mounted police were stationed in front of the British mission this afternoon and turned back mobs who were attemping to stage anti-English demonstrations.

The crowds assembled before the foreign office and gave vent to their wrath.

Break in Trade Relations Looms.

MOSCOW, May 14.—England will suffer more than Russia from the break in trade relations which is predicted as the result of the police raid on Soviet house in London, the official newspaper Izvestia stated today.

Izvestia states that the British government has begun a drive which will end in the breaking of relations with the Soviet union, as threatened by the last Chamberlain note to Russia. The newspaper predicts that the raids will be followed by the publication of "counterfeit documents."

"England will suffer more than Russia," said Izvestia, "since many competitors will share the Soviet market now held by England. The policy of forcing a break in relations, which the British government apparently has inaugurated, carries a threat of unheard of complications to European economic conditions and will be a public calamity. It comes at a moment when strained trade conditions between England and the Soviet union are lessening and Russia has entered the economic conference to discuss ways and means to enter world trade."

Police Search "Strong Room".

LONDON May 14.—A nine foot wall of steel and concrete guarding the Soviets' trade and diplomatic secrets in raided Soviet House yielded today to pneumatic drills, acetylene torches, picks, shovels and crow bars.

The police forced themselves into the "strong room" in continuation of

MAN CONVICTED IN SLAYING OF ANANIA GETS LIFE SENTENCE

Fight for New Trial May go to Supreme Court.

Defense Guns are Turned on Marie Chorgas.

Salvatore Rini, 22, of East Liverpool, who entered the state penitentiary at Columbus today to begin serving a life sentence for second degree murder in the death of Pasquale (Patsy) Anania, 25, of Wellsville, will carry his fight for a new trial to the supreme court, if necessary, Attorney Raymond Knepper, of Wellsville, declared last night.

Goes to Appellate Court.

Steps are expected to be taken at once to ask the appellate court to reverse the action yesterday afternoon of Judge W. F. Lones, who, after hearing arguments in common pleas court, Lisbon, overruled the defense motion to set aside the jury's verdict in the first trial.

After denying another trial, Judge Lones sentenced Rini to life imprisonment for the death of Anania, whose body, with a knife wound in the heart, was found in his (Rini's) apartment in Walnut street on last March 22.

When asked if he had anything to say as to why sentence should not be passed, Rini, sitting beside his father, Philip Rini of Wellsville, stood up and declared:

"I am innocent, Your Honor."

Attorneys Clash.

Rini was taken to prison early today, 53 days after the body of Anania was found, by Sheriff George Wright of Lisbon. His father and mother, the latter very nervous and weeping and sister said goodbye to their son and brother in the jury room in the courthouse after sentence was pronounced yesterday afternoon.

Attorney W. A. O'Grady, of Wellsville, and Prosecutor Robert M. Brookes clashed during the arguments on the defense motion for a new trial, when O'Grady charged that evidence had been suppressed in the case. O'Grady cited the fact that although money had been telegraphed to her, Rini's wife failed to appear to testify.

O'Grady also turned his guns on Mrs. Marie Chorgas, 28, of Minneapolis, Rini's sister-in law and co-defendant, who was acquitted by the jury upon the recommendation of the state. Mrs. Chorgas, waiving her exemption as a co-defendant, testified for the prosecution, declaring Anania, in a dying whisper, said: "Sal did it."

Both O'Grady and Knepper argued

BY LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

BATON ROUGE, La., May 14.—Through at last with the feeble resistance of man-made levees, the flood waters of the Mississippi spread leisurely today over a home stretch to the Gulf of Mexico. Over the whole countryside in south central Louisiana the river has had its way, from Cairo to Cottonport.

From Cottonport to the gulf is a matter of ten days' disaster, in half a dozen rich and fertile parishes comprising a tillable area of 4,200,000 acres. Within the region resides 258,917 persons.

There are more refugees today—almost 4,000 at Marksville alone, 1,500 at Bunkie, thousands more scattered along the high ground west of the new swath marked for inundation by the crumbling of the Bayou Des Glaises levees.

More Homes Abandoned.

More homes have been abandoned, more livestock parked hopefully upon mushy levees as once again the cycle of the cravasse works itself out in a new country.

State relief headquarters here are organized to care for 100,000 more flood exiles within a fortnight. They hope but do not yet venture the unqualified assertion that this will be the end.

Another Parish Threatened.

Torrential rains in the lower valley during the last two days have forced engineers and meterologists to revise their estimates of maximum high waters between Baton Rouge and New Orleans, and three danger points along the levees south of the Old river, the last tributary, hold the dike patrols and revetment builders to their wearying labors. If the danger points hold, the greatest flood of United States history has wrought its last dramatic destruction.

If the Old river levee at Torras caves under, the undaunted residents of Pointe Coupe parish who stand today in the most northerly part of unflooded West Bank, another parish of 600 square miles and 25,000 population will go under.

That surely, say the engineers, should be the end.

Or it may be the Morgansea sector of the Mississippi levee on the west bank, 25 miles north of Baton Rouge, or at Angola, on the east bank, 60 miles north of Baton Rouge. Everything depends upon how much water is yet to roll down the main channel from the confluence of the Old, Red and Mississippi to the gulf. Because of the undeterminable elements involved in the yesterday's breaks in the bayou dikes no one will know for several days what relief has been afforded the lest reaches of the Mississippi by the breaks in the last barrier.

Melville Evacuated.

Rolling slowly southward behind the west levees of the Atchafalaya, the flood waters from northeastern Louisiana unleashed through the Bayou Des Glaises breaks had reached

'STELLA DALLAS' AT AMERICAN

Dramatic Story of Typical American Life.

"Stella Dallas," the stupendous film production which opens a four-day run Monday at the American theatre, a United Artists Corporation offering, directed by Henry King and presented by Samuel Goldwyn, is a vividly dramatic modern story of typical American life.

It depends not upon the usual motion pictures "bokum" of wild chases, runaway stage coaches, prairie fires, or battles for the dramatic element, but rather, upon the sincere, talented interpretations of typical American characters by a cast of unquestioned ability and popularity.

Henry King, to whose lot has fallen the direction of many of the screen's great success, says "Stella Dallas" contains more real drama, intermingled with the lighter moments, than any story he has yet interpreted for the screen.

One of the high lights of this story is the unswerving faith and love for her mother, played by Belle Bennett, faithfully enacted by Lois Moran, Samuel Goldwyn's most recent discovery. The little girl, and later, the young woman, fully cognizant of her mother's shortcomings, remains blue true to the end, preferring to sacrifice friends, a beautiful home and the companionship of worth-while people which she really craved, rather than forsake her mother, whose every living ambition and desire has ever been wrapped up in the daughter.

There is one episode where, humiliated by her mother's uncouth appearance and manners, before the fastidious crowd of young folks who were the girl's intimates, Laurel insists that they leave at once the resort where they are vacationing. That night, aboard the sleeper, both hear the same crowd of thoughtless youngsters merrily ridiculing Stella Dallas and sympathizing with Laurel over her mother's appearance.

The scene is one which will remain indelibly stamped upon the memory. The suffering of the mother at the realization of the probable humiliation of her daughter, and her "opossum playing" in order that Laurel, if awake, might believe she slept through the heartless conversation, rivals the concern of the girl, her slipping quietly from her upper berth to investigate, her relief at finding the mother apparently sleeping, and her slipping under the covers to pass the remainder of the night cuddling next to her dearest possession—Mother!

Another situation is that where Stella, finally determined to sacrifice everything that her daughter might have every advantage, and realizing her former husband's love for his earlier sweetheart, played by Alice Joyce, voluntarily goes to her rival and offers to divorce the husband, portrayed by Ronald Colman, if the pair will marry and take Laurel into their beautiful home.

And when the loyal little Laurel discovers this sacrifice she haughtily informs her father and his wife that never, "as long as her mother lived" would she dwell apart from her.

Failing in this play, Stella Dallas makes the supreme sacrifice marrying a man for whom she has no love, and deceiving her litle daughter whom she loves more than life itself, into believing her fickle and heartless.

Youth of the Atlas

BY MARSHALL D. HALL
AUTHOR OF "THE VALLEY OF STRIFE" AND "RIDDLE OF THE CIRCLE" ETC. ETC.

SYNOPSIS.

LARRY GRENFALL, American traveler and student of Eastern magic, receives a telephone call from BEN MANSOUR, cosmopolite and old friend, saying he must see him at once.

GILES, Mansour's servant, drives Larry to his friend's house. While the two are talking a turbanned head appears at the window, Mansour opens it and a Moor steps in. He gives Mansour a ring as a token, set with a magnificent ruby. Mansour throws it on a table. Through the Moor it is revealed that Mansour is a Moor and ruler of his tribe. For some reason he must die but he insists that his son rule after him. Mansour says that he has taken poison and the Moor goes, tossing into the room a tiny ivory tiger—the Striped Death Mansour asks Grenfall if he will go to Morocco, find the Temple, endure the Ordeal and crush the Group—all of which is Greek to Grenfall. He is to find a certain Omar ben Medjad. Then Mansour dies. Giles has instructions to open a certain trunk and take care of the letters he will find therein.

Giles and Grenfall open the trunk, finding Mansour's will and a letter to Grenfall asking him to carry out the instructions he gave him before he died. Grenfall takes the ruby ring and tells Giles he is going to Morocco.

Larry arrives in Morocco and is solicited for alms by a mendicant.

CHAPTER SIX.

Larry's heart bounded and he paused, fumbling in a packet. Apparently he was having trouble finding change. The beggar's voice whined again:

"By the token, Allah shall bless the giver of alms, O lordly one; by the token."

Larry suppressed a start. He had purposely fumbled about his pockets, expecting the mendicant to speak, to voice low-whispered directions as to where Omar ben Medjad's shop might be. Could the fellow be wanting proof that he was the one who would come seeking Omar? He wondered; then turning his hand he let the flickering glow from a sickly, nearby torch, fall on the palm. Briefly, the ruby reflected from its thousand facets the dull light. Now the mendicant spoke again, a low gasp:

"The Eye of the Prophet!"

Larry lowered his hand and thrust it back within his pocket. This time when it came forth it held a small piece of silver. He tossed it carelessly to the Doukkala beggar and heard his nasal whine again, interspersed with whispers:

"May Allah bless you—follow me as I turn—until the Seventh Day—stay not too close—ah, you are kind—lose not sight of me—father of a thousand mercies!"

On the words of the mendicant turned and moved slowly off in the crowd. Larry followed, taking care to move carelessly, but keeping the Doukkala beggar in sight from the corner of his eye. He noticed a tiny bit of scarlet flaring on the back of the man's bournouse, as though it had been patched there. Instantly, his admiration rose. In a land of dirty brown bournouses, the mendicant had realized that it would be next to impossible to follow any particular one of them through a crowd, and he placed the psuedo patch as an eye-guide that could not be missed. Larry, grateful for the man's thoughtfulness, walked slowly after him.

Now he was in thke heart of the crowd, his face serene, but his ears drinking in low mutterings of uncomplimentary nature, spoken for the most part in the Chleuh dialect. An infidel dog in the midst of the Believers! Had it not been for the menacing eye of the fortress in the shadow of the hills, he knew that ere long a curved thin blade would reach him and another mysterious killing would be charged up to Morocco.

Red Patch suddenly left the crowd and darted down a dark alleyway. Larry, reaching it, paused briefly. Little liking was in him for the looks of the place, but there seemed nothing else for it, so he stepped forward and was almost instantly swallowed up in intense darkness. Red Patch had vanished. Taking three steps forward, Larry stopped. His foot had touched something; in fact, he had nearly stumbled over it. He stopped, the while his right hand grasped the butt of an automatic, and felt that the thing which he had kicked was a human body! Now, he heard a voice:

"'Tis I, Abdu Madullah. Do you take my burnouse, continue straight down the alleyway to the first crossway to your left. Go down that to the fifth door on your right and knock thrice, then twice. Hasten."

Silently Larry took the burnouse and threw it about him, sensing that the man had partly risen and was fumbling at him. He bent again.

"My turban," the other whispered. "Set it upon your head, then go."

In exactly one minute Larry, ostensibly as much a Moor as he had previously been an American, left the mendicant and hastened down the alley as best he could, since he could barely see a yard ahead of him. He had progressed, he judged, for three minutes, then he heard a cry behind, recognizing the voice of the beggar:

"Ai, ai, an infidel dog has struck me down and robbed me; ai, ai, this way."

Startled, Larry wondered if this were a trap; if he had been lured here for the purpose of murder and robbery. He accelerated his pace until he was running in the darkness, then saw that he had reached the crossway. Rapidly he swung around the corner to his left, watching closely for the doorways as he did so. His heart pounding a little he stopped before the door of the fifth house on the right hand side of the alley in the direction he was going. He heard a hue and cry behind him, voices shouting curse and threats; he lifted his hand and knocked thrice, then twice.

Instanly the door swung open and he was grasped and pulled inside, into sheer darkness. Instinctively he ducked his head and his hand dropped to his gun. He heard shouts close by and knew his pursuers had turned the corner. The door closed softly and a hand grasped him gently by the arm.

"Silence," he heard a voice hiss.

Then hue and cry swept by the door, making the alleyway ring with the racket and hubbub. As the sounds died out the hand on his arm tugged gently and he was led along a narrow hallway and down a short flight of steps. Through another door he was led, then saw a dull sliver light, as though it were shining from beneath still another portal. To this his guide led him. He opened the door and they stepped into a lighted room. Larry turned and looked at his host.

A gaunt, stoop-shouldered man with a patch over one eye and a matted beard stood beside him, his one good eye gleaming brightly in the dull glow of the lamp.

The individual pointed toward a pile of cushions.

"Be seated, moulay," he said.

"You will tell me where I will find Omar—"

The other's uplifted hand checked him.

"It is wise that names sometimes be left unsaid. I am he you seek. The Doukkala mendicant waited for three successive days. You are late?"

"Now, in Allah's name, how do you know that?" Larry gasped. "As for that, how did you know I would be here at all?"

"Allah's ways are mysterious and wonderful; who am I to say how certain things come to pass?"

"Which is your polite Moroccan way of telling me it's none of my damned business how the word reached you," Larry snapped.

"As moulay wills," the other answered humbly.

"Well," said Larry, "what now?"

"Is that for me to say?"

Larry gave it up.

"I seek a thing in a temple," he said. "I have promised one whom we both know that I will find both and give the one to you."

"Moulay has a token that might indicate he speaks with authority?" The other's voice was studiously without accent, seemingly lifeless, yet the one good eye was agleam with interest.

"I have this," said Larry, and turned his hand palm upward. The other looked at it, bowing humbly.

"It is sufficient. We shall go where we may talk. Come."

PRODUCT of GENERAL MOTORS

South of the Atlas

BY MARSHALL P. HALL
AUTHOR OF "THE VALLEY OF STOIFE" AND "RIDDLE OF THE CIRCLE" ETC.

SYNOPSIS.

LARRY GRENFALL, American traveler and student of Eastern magic, receives a telephone call from BEN MANSOUR, cosmopolite and old friend, saying he must see him at once.

GILES, Mansour's servant, drives Larry to his friend's house. While the two are talking a turbanned head appears at the window, Mansour opens it and a Moor steps in. He gives Mansour a ring as a token, set with a magnificent ruby. Mansour throws it on a table. Through the Moor it is revealed that Mansour is a Moor and ruler of his tribe. For some reason he must die but he insists that his son rule after him. Mansour says that he has taken poison and the Moor goes, tossing into the room a tiny ivory tiger—the Striped Death Mansour asks Grenfall if he will go to Morocco, find the Temple, endure the Ordeal and crush the Group—all of which is Greek to Grenfall. He is to find a certain Omar ben Medjad. Then Mansour dies. Giles has instructions to open a certain trunk and take care of the letters he will find therein.

Giles and Grenfall open the trunk, finding Mansour's will and a letter to Grenfall asking him to carry out the instructions he gave him before he died. Grenfall takes the ruby ring and tells Giles he is going to Morocco.

Larry arrives in Morocco and is solicited for alms by a mendicant.

CHAPTER SIX.

Larry's heart bounded and he paused, fumbling in a packet. Apparently he was having trouble finding change. The beggar's voice whined again:

"By the token, Allah shall bless the giver of alms, O lordly one; by the token."

Larry suppressed a start. He had purposely fumbled about his pockets, expecting the mendicant to speak, to voice low-whispered directions as to where Omar ben Medjad's shop might be. Could the fellow be wanting proof that he was the one who would come seeking Omar? He wondered; then turning his hand he let the flickering glow from a sickly, nearby torch, fall on the palm. Briefly, the ruby reflected from its thousand facets the dull light. Now the mendicant spoke again, a low gasp:

"The Eye of the Prophet!"

Larry lowered his hand and thrust it back within his pocket. This time when it came forth it held a small piece of silver. He tossed it carelessly to the Doukkala beggar and heard his nasal whine again, interspersed with whispers:

"May Allah bless you—follow me as I turn—until the Seventh Day—stay not too close—ah, you are kind—lose not sight of me—father of a thousand mercies!"

On the words of the mendicant turned and moved slowly off in the crowd. Larry followed, taking care to move carelessly, but keeping the Doukkala beggar in sight from the corner of his eye. He noticed a tiny bit of scarlet flaring on the back of the man's bournouse, as though it had been patched there. Instantly, his admiration rose. In a land of dirty brown bournouses, the mendicant had realized that it would be next to impossible to follow any particular one of them through a crowd, and he placed the psuedo patch as an eye-guide that could not be missed. Larry, grateful for the man's thoughtfulness, walked slowly after him.

Now he was in thke heart of the crowd, his face serene, but his ears drinking in low mutterings of uncomplimentary nature, spoken for the most part in the Chleuh dialect. An infidel dog in the midst of the Believers! Had it not been for the menacing eye of the fortress in the shadow of the hills, he knew that ere long a curved thin blade would reach him and another mysterious killing would be charged up to Morocco.

Dramatic Story of Typical American Life.

"Stella Dallas," the stupendous film production which opens a four-day run Monday at the American theatre, a United Artists Corporation offering, directed by Henry King and presented by Samuel Goldwyn, is a vividly dramatic modern story of typical American life.

It depends not upon the usual motion pictures "bokum" of wild chases, runaway stage coaches, prairie fires, or battles for the dramatic element, but rather, upon the sincere, talented interpretations of typical American characters by a cast of unquestioned ability and popularity.

Henry King, to whose lot has fallen the direction of many of the screen's great success, says "Stella Dallas" contains more real drama, intermingled with the lighter moments, than any story he has yet interpreted for the screen.

One of the high lights of this story is the unswerving faith and love for her mother, played by Belle Bennett, faithfully enacted by Lois Moran. Samuel Goldwyn's most recent discovery. The little girl, and later, the young woman, fully cognizant of her mother's shortcomings, remains blue true to the end, preferring to sacrifice friends, a beautiful home and the companionship of worth-while people which she really craved, rather than forsake her mother, whose every living ambition and desire has ever been wrapped up in the daughter.

There is one episode where, humiliated by her mother's uncouth appearance and manners, before the fastidious crowd of young folks who were the girl's intimates, Laurel insists that they leave at once the resort where they are vacationing. That night, aboard the sleeper, both hear the same crowd of thoughtless youngsters merrily ridiculing Stella Dallas and sympathizing with Laurel over her mother's appearance.

The scene is one which will remain indelibly stamped upon the memory. The suffering of the mother at the realization of the probable humiliation of her daughter, and her "opossum playing" in order that Laurel, if awake, might believe she slept through the heartless conversation, rivals the concern of the girl, her slipping quietly from her upper berth to investigate, her relief at finding the mother apparently sleeping, and her slipping under the covers to pass the remainder of the night cuddling next to her dearest possession—Mother!

Another situation is that where Stella, finally determined to sacrifice everything that her daughter might have every advantage, and realizing her former husband's love for his earlier sweetheart, played by Alice Joyce, voluntarily goes to her rival and offers to divorce the husband, portrayed by Ronald Colman, if the pair will marry and take Laurel into their beautiful home.

And when the loyal little Laurel discovers this sacrifice she haughtily informs her father and his wife that never, "as long as her mother lived" would she dwell apart from her.

Failing in this play, Stella Dallas makes the supreme sacrifice marrying a man for whom she has no love, and deceiving her little daughter whom she loves more than life itself, into believing her fickle and heartless.

Kaynee Wash Suits FOR BOYS

A year's time brings a surprising growth to boys from 2 to 8 years. No doubt your son has outgrown his last year's wash suits and needs a new supply for this Spring. Of course every Mother is looking for serviceability in boys' washtogs. A healthy, sturdy boy needs to give vent to his energy and play instincts and his clothes must allow him free play.

You will will find the Kaynee Washtogs entirely satisfactory in the respect of durability. Made of the best of fabrics, they stand an enormous amount of wear. Every seam is double stitched. No chance is taken with the buttons—they are on to stay. Every detail is finished in a way that puts to shame even women's garments.

Not only are they durable, but they combine smariness and style with their serviceability. They are well tailored, manly little models with plenty of pockets to hold a boy's dear possessions.

We are now showing our new Spring display of these well-known washtogs. Among them are the button-on styles and the very popular belted Flapper suits. The latter are particularly in favor now.

These Kaynee washtogs come in all the gay new colors—shades of tan, blue, orange, green, etc., and keep their colors too, after many launderings.

There are broadcloths, linens, ginghams and suitings. Some are all of one color—others have plain color pants and dotted or striped waists. White collars and cuffs—embroidered motifs and other trimming features.

Sizes 2 to 8 years. Priced from $1.95 to $5.75.

The little girl, and later, the young woman, fully cognizant of her mother's shortcomings, remains blue true to the end, preferring to sacrifice friends, a beautiful home and the companionship of worth-while people which she really craved, rather than forsake her mother, whose every living ambition and desire has ever been wrapped up in the daughter.

There is one episode where, humiliated by her mother's uncouth appearance and manners, before the fastidious crowd of young folks who were the girl's intimates, Laurel insists that they leave at once the resort where they are vacationing. That night, aboard the sleeper, both hear the same crowd of thoughtless youngsters merrily ridiculing Stella Dallas and sympathizing with Laurel over her mother's appearance.

The scene is one which will remain indelibly stamped upon the memory. The suffering of the mother at the realization of the probable humiliation of her daughter, and her "opossum playing" in order that Laurel, if awake, might believe she slept through the heartless conversation, rivals the concern of the girl, her slipping quietly from her upper berth to investigate, her relief at finding the mother apparently sleeping, and her slipping under the covers to pass the remainder of the night cuddling next to her dearest possession—Mother!

Another situation is that where Stella, finally determined to sacrifice everything that her daughter might have every advantage, and realizing her former husband's love for his earlier sweetheart, played by Alice Joyce, voluntarily goes to her rival and offers to divorce the husband, portrayed by Ronald Colman, if the pair will marry and take Laurel into their beautiful home.

And when the loyal little Laurel discovers this sacrifice she haughtily informs her father and his wife that never, "as long as her mother lived" would she dwell apart from her.

Failing in this play, Stella Dallas makes the supreme sacrifice marrying a man for whom she has no love, and deceiving her litle daughter whom she loves more than life itself, into believing her fickle and heartless.

Kaynee Wash Suits FOR BOYS

A year's time brings a surprising growth to boys from 2 to 8 years. No doubt your son has outgrown his last year's wash suits and needs a new supply for this Spring. Of course every Mother is looking for serviceability in boys' washtogs. A healthy, sturdy boy needs to give vent to his energy and play instincts and his clothes must allow him free play.

You will will find the Kaynee Washtogs entirely satisfactory in the respect of durability. Made of the best of fabrics, they stand an enormous amount of wear. Every seam is double stitched. No chance is taken with the buttons—they are on to stay. Every detail is finished in a way that puts to shame even women's garments.

Not only are they durable, but they combine smariness and style with their serviceability. They are well tailored, manly little models with plenty of pockets to hold a boy's dear possessions.

We are now showing our new Spring display of these well-known washtogs. Among them are the button-on styles and the very popular belted Flapper suits. The latter are particularly in favor now.

These Kaynee washtogs come in all the gay new colors—shades of tan, blue, orange, green, etc., and keep their colors too, after many launderings.

There are broadcloths, linens, ginghams and suitings. Some are all of one color—others have plain color pants and dotted or striped waists. White collars and cuffs—embroidered motifs and other trimming features.

Sizes 2 to 8 years. Priced from $1.95 to $5.75.

South of the Atlas

By Marshall D. Hall, Author of "The Valley of Strife" and "Riddle of the Circle" etc.

SYNOPSIS.

LARRY GRENFALL, American traveler and student of Eastern magic, receives a telephone call from BEN MANSOUR, cosmopolite and old friend, saying he must see him at once.

GILES, Mansour's servant, drives Larry to his friend's house. While the two are talking a turbanned head appears at the window, Mansour opens it and a Moor steps in. He gives Mansour a ring as a token, set with a magnificent ruby. Mansour throws it on a table. Through the Moor it is revealed that Mansour is a Moor and ruler of his tribe. For some reason he must die but he insists that his son rule after him. Mansour says that he has taken poison and the Moor goes, tossing into the room a tiny ivory tiger—the Striped Death Mansour asks Grenfall if he will go to Morocco, find the Temple, endure the Ordeal and crush the Group—all of which is Greek to Grenfall. He is to find a certain Omar ben Medjad. Then Mansour dies. Giles has instructions to open a certain trunk and take care of the letters he will find therein.

Giles and Grenfall open the trunk, finding Mansour's will and a letter to Grenfall asking him to carry out the instructions he gave him before he died. Grenfall takes the ruby ring and tells Giles he is going to Morocco.

Larry arrives in Morocco and is solicited for alms by a mendicant.

CHAPTER SIX.

Larry's heart bounded and he paused, fumbling in a packet. Apparently he was having trouble finding change. The beggar's voice whined again:

"By the token, Allah shall bless the giver of alms, O lordly one; by the token."

Larry suppressed a start. He had purposely fumbled about his pockets, expecting the mendicant to speak, to voice low-whispered directions as to where Omar ben Medjad's shop might be. Could the fellow be wanting proof that he was the one who would come seeking Omar? He wondered; then turning his hand he let the flickering glow from a sickly, nearby torch, fall on the palm. Briefly, the ruby reflected from its thousand facets the dull light. Now the mendicant spoke again, a low gasp:

"The Eye of the Prophet!"

Larry lowered his hand and thrust it back within his pocket. This time when it came forth it held a small piece of silver. He tossed it carelessly to the Doukkala beggar and heard his nasal whine again, interspersed with whispers:

"May Allah bless you—follow me as I turn—until the Seventh Day—stay not too close—ah, you are kind—lose not sight of me—father of a thousand mercies!"

On the words of the mendicant turned and moved slowly off in the crowd. Larry followed, taking care to move carelessly, but keeping the Doukkala beggar in sight from the corner of his eye. He noticed a tiny bit of scarlet flaring on the back of the man's bournouse, as though it had been patched there. Instantly, his admiration rose. In a land of dirty brown bournouses, the mendicant had realized that it would be next to impossible to follow any particular one of them through a crowd, and he placed the psuedo patch as an eye-guide that could not be missed. Larry, grateful for the man's thoughtfulness, walked slowly after him.

Now he was in thke heart of the crowd, his face serene, but his ears drinking in low mutterings of uncomplimentary nature, spoken for the most part in the Chleuh dialect. An infidel dog in the midst of the Believers! Had it not been for the menacing eye of the fortress in the shadow of the hills, he knew that ere long a curved thin blade would reach him and another mysterious killing would be charged up to Morocco.

Red Patch suddenly left the crowd and darted down a dark alleyway. Larry, reaching it, paused briefly. Little liking was in him for the looks of the place, but there seemed nothing else for it, so he stepped forward and was almost instantly swallowed up in intense darkness. Red Patch had vanished. Taking three steps forward, Larry stopped. His foot had touched something; in fact, he had nearly stumbled over it. He stopped, the while his right hand grasped the butt of an automatic, and felt that the thing which he had kicked was a human body! Now, he heard a voice:

"'Tis I, Abdu Madullah. Do you take my burnouse, continue straight down the alleyway to the first crossway to your left. Go down that to the fifth door on your right and knock thrice, then twice. Hasten."

Silently Larry took the burnouse and threw it about him, sensing that the man had partly risen and was fumbling at him. He bent again.

"My turban," the other whispered. "Set it upon your head, then go."

In exactly one minute Larry, ostensibly as much a Moor as he had previously been an American, left the mendicant and hastened down the alley as best he could, since he could barely see a yard ahead of him. He had progressed, he judged, for three minutes, then he heard a cry behind, recognizing the voice of the beggar:

"Ai, ai, an infidel dog has struck me down and robbed me; ai, ai, this way."

Startled, Larry wondered if this were a trap; if he had been lured here for the purpose of murder and robbery. He accelerated his pace until he was running in the darkness, then saw that he had reached the crossway. Rapidly he swung around the corner to his left, watching closely for the doorways as he did so. His heart pounding a little he stopped before the door of the fifth house on the right hand side of the alley in the direction he was going. He heard a hue and cry behind him, voices shouting curse and threats; he lifted his hand and knocked thrice, then twice.

Instanly the door swung open and he was grasped and pulled inside, into sheer darkness. Instinctively he ducked his head and his hand dropped to his gun. He heard shouts close by and knew his pursuers had turned the corner. The door closed softly and a hand grasped him gently by the arm.

"Silence," he heard a voice hiss.

Then hue and cry swept by the door, making the alleyway ring with the racket and hubbub. As the sounds died out the hand on his arm tugged gently and he was led along a narrow hallway and down a short flight of steps. Through another door he was led, then saw a dull sliver light, as though it were shining from beneath still another portal. To this his guide led him. He opened the door and they stepped into a lighted room. Larry turned and looked at his host.

A gaunt, stoop-shouldered man with a patch over one eye and a matted beard stood beside him, his one good eye gleaming brightly in the dull glow of the lamp.

The individual pointed toward a pile of cushions.

"Be seated, moulay," he said.

"You will tell me where I will find Omar—"

The other's uplifted hand checked him.

"It is wise that names sometimes be left unsaid. I am he you seek. The Doukkala mendicant waited for three successive days. You are late?"

"Now, in Allah's name, how do you know that?" Larry gasped. "As for that, how did you know I would be here at all?"

"Allah's ways are mysterious and wonderful; who am I to say how certain things come to pass?"

"Which is your polite Moroccan way of telling me it's none of my damned business how the word reached you," Larry snapped.

"As moulay wills," the other answered humbly.

"Well," said Larry, "what now?"

"Is that for me to say?"

Larry gave it up.

"I seek a thing in a temple," he said. "I have promised one whom we both know that I will find both and give the one to you."

"Moulay has a token that might indicate he speaks with authority?" The other's voice was studiously without accent, seemingly lifeless, yet the one good eye was agleam with interest.

"I have this," said Larry, and turned his hand palm upward. The other looked at it, bowing humbly.

"It is sufficient. We shall go where we may talk. Come."

Nicaragua Policy

The present Nicaragua situation is clearly shown in a document recently made public by the State Department. It is a letter delivered to Gen. Moncada, "rebel war chief," by Henry L. Stimson, President Coolidge's special envoy to Nicaragua. It reads:

"Concerning our conversation this morning, I have the honor to inform you that I am authorized to say that the president of the United States intends to accept the request of the Nicaragua government to supervise the election of 1928; that the retention of President Diaz during the remainder of his term is regarded as essential to that plan and will be insisted upon; that a general disarmament of the country also is regarded as necessary for the proper and successful conduct of such election, and that the forces of the United States will be authorized to accept the custody of the arms of those willing to lay them down, including the government, and to disarm forcibly those who will not do so."

This, of course, means frank intervention. Our government has intervened in Nicaragua and stopped the fighting and is going to disarm anybody on either side who starts anything, including the forces of the Diaz government which our government is upholding. More American marines are sent to enforce this policy. Uncle Sam is to remain in Nicaragua and supervise a new election next year. After that—well it depends on circumstances.

Some call this "the new Monroe Doctrine." Some don't call it anything, but say it's necessary, to keep the peace in the continental neighborhood and safeguard the Panama canal. Others object. It will doubtless afford a fruitful topic for argument when congress meets again.

Windshield Warnings

Motorists breaking traffic rules are treated to a new kind of warning in Weston, Ont. Slips have been prepared on which all the usual traffic rules are printed. In case of infraction, one of these comprehensive slips is pasted on the erring driver's windshield, with the particular rule he has broken underlined. There is a postscript at the bottom stating that a second offense will mean arrest.

This ought to have a wholesome effect, and should be welcomed by motorists capable of taking a friendly hint.

There may be complications, however. A driver, after being subjected to this treatment, may be inclined to proceed through town with eyes glued to the list of traffic rules, instead of watching the traffic itself. Pasting anything on the windshield is not sanctioned much in this country any more. By distracting the attention of drivers and obscuring their view, it causes many mishaps.

Chewing Up Forests

The world's chicle forests are being chewed up by American gum chewers and their imitators in other lands. Certain varieties of trees whose sap is used in making chewing gum are killed by the necessary tapping, not immediately but within a few years. Thus the original stands in Central America and along the Amazon valley are slowly disappearing. Other regions in other parts of the world have already been tapped and are consequently doomed.

Lest anyone to whom gum chewing is an annoyance leap to the conclusion that that pastime will disappear along with the original trees, it should be said that cultivated plantations are to take the place of wild forests. Before extinction has actually overcome all the gum-producing trees in the world, manufacturers will have established plantations big enough to supply their growing needs.

Some other means must be sought to combat the chewing gum menace.

Mausoleums

A single lady dying in Albany, N. Y., leaves a fortune of $300,000, nine-tenths of which is set aside to build a mausoleum in her memory in the little town she came from.

That is a good and worthy deed if the mausoleum is to be devoted to the general service of the community. Then nobody will grudge the lady this method of perpetuating her memory. If it is entirely for the use of the donor, as in many a similar case, it bespeaks only a pitiful and foolish ambition.

The only monument worth anything is one built by others. The finest memorial is living memory of merits, passing on to succeeding generations without any effort of the one remembered.

The old Pharaohs got away with it, but the world today wants deeds rather than marble monuments.

Uncle Sam's "sphere of influence," it appears, is the Spanish-American territory between here and the Panama Canal. And the Spanish word for influence is "influenza," otherwise known as "flu."

For a nation that is supposed to have invented the art of war several thousand years ago, the Chinese don't seem to have got very far with it.

The president thinks the big flood is bad enough, without giving congress a chance to turn loose a flood of oratory about it.

The average motorist is less concerned about how many miles per gallon than than how many miles per hour.

When the birds build a home, they stay there and use it.

Two women with the decorations of an apartment as a commission, were passing on wallpaper, but had not finished their selections, when luncheon time arrived. The salesman had been particularly obliging and instructive and on the way out they asked the manager for his name.

"His name is Sheridan," said the manager.

By way of clinching recollection of the name they thought of "Sheridan's Ride," went out to luncheon and returned. On entering the main door one of them said to an employe:

"We would like to see Mr. Paul Revere."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 14.—No free attraction seems to attract so much attention in Manhattan as the display in the windows of sporting goods stores. Here pale clerks and others who lead sedentary lives stand riveted to dream awhile of the great outdoors.

It is a momentary hiatus from the riveting rat-a-tat, the clanging cars, screeching sirens and overtone of a metropolitan medley. The bookkeeper escapes from his figures and in an imaginative moment fits himself into wide pocketed hunting coats to flush quail. Or stalk deer.

The care worn stenographer dons flannel skirt and blazer to go swinging around the course. And the gnarled old A. D. T. messenger, with perhaps an atrophied dangling arm, stands fixed before a brace of guns listening to the baying of dogs treeing a bear.

Youth, middle and old age seem spellbound in presence of this citified call to the hills, the streams and forests. Long after traffic desolation groups will clot in front of the windows staring in the manner of birds charmed by the snake.

It offers a reverse picture of the prairie boy with his dog at the railroad crossing watching the dazzling and thundering overland express out of sight. Scores of pinch-faced cliff dwellers are always to be found in the expansive show rooms. Just loitering.

In the windows are braces of blue metal guns, saddles and quirks, nickel plated reels and collapsible rods, dude wrangling dinner sets in alligator cases, pocket shaving outfits, thick soled hunting boots, breakfast tom-toms, pup tents, forest library sets, camp radios and the like.

There are archery sets, ping pong boards, checkers, chess, waterproof playing cards, shuffle board, tree hammocks, gaudy golf hose, red hunting coats, red silk bandanas, snake bite serum in bright nickel plated boxes, full lined gloves and sun goggles.

It was Fred C. Kelly who espied a nattily dressed man in a crowded subway express carrying an ax. "Ah," observed Kelly to a friend, "a woodsman from Brooklyn."

The one gallused boy with the crownless straw hat who slings a shot gun over his shoulder, calls his hound Drum and swings off on a long hunt would doubtless be bewildered at the trappings for the modern hunters. There are even manicure sets for them.

In those pleasant chain restaurants featuring a background of marble and mirror will always be found a sprinkling of lone and middle aged New York ladies. Sometimes they come in pairs but usually they are alone. One has the impression it is their idea of a night out to dine in the clatter of the glass topped tables. They linger—and most of them indulge a cigarette over the coffee. And doubtless they go back to cheerless rooms—several flights up and all the way back and solitude. Some are those living on slight incomes but the majority are office women showing the pinch of under-salaried lives.

I once started conversation with a middle aged lady at an adjoining table in one of those "Southern cooking" places. She told me that outside of the lady who conducted the rooming house where she lived she had not talked to another soul in 10 days. "And," she added, "down in my Georgian town I was considered the gabbiest woman there."

Lonely Clubs in Manhattan have been numerous but never successful. The idea of being tagged as lonely dries up conversation. And after one visit few return.

It is my opinion there is no excuse for loneliness in New York. The big problem here is to get away from people.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Life Insurance.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 14.—The life insurance business is ever now and then getting a bad rap, such as that unfolded by the murder trial in New York which revealed that a man might be insured for an amount that he did not know anything about, under a double indemnity clause to which he was a stranger, and then find himself the object of a coroner's inquest, with a faithless wife and her paramour held to account for his sudden demise.

Husbands who are not exactly certain where their wives have been spending week-ends will be poor prospects for life insurance salesmen for some time—at least until that affair over on Long Island gets off the first page of the newspapers and a home-loving man can hang a picture without shuddering over the thought of what deadly uses can be made of the wire. It is even possible that some policies will be canceled by cautious individuals who think that they may live longer if not so heavily insured.

However, in spite of all such handicaps the life insurance business is carrying on bravely and is what might be termed one of the major industries of the world. There are 357 companies in the United States and they have assets aggregating almost $13,000,000,000, with insurance in force totaling more than $80,000,000,000.

Fifty-two of the larger companies held at the close of the last calender year city mortgages worth $3,123,000,000, farm mortgages of $1,950,000,000, railroad stocks and bonds with a value of $2,435,000,000, government obligations to the amount of $1,116,000,000, and public utility securities to the extent of $819,000,000. These 52 companies had 92.4 per cent of the assets of all the life insurance companies in the United States.

It is impossible to state, with accuracy, how many individuals are covered by the vast amount of insurance in force, because many of the insured carry more than one policy. Leroy A. Lincoln, general counsel of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, estimates, however, that at least 58,000,000 people are protected by life insurance for an average, per person, of about $1,400, or, exclusive of industrial insurance, about $2,600.

Largely for City Dwellers.

Substantially all this insurance is on the lives of city dwellers. Rural families—residents on farms and in communities of less than 2,500 inhabitants—are difficult to reach, and, hence, are still largely out of the field of life insurance protection, according to Mr. Lincoln. In the cities, in marked contrast, there is scarcely a home without one or more insurance policies, and there are cities in which the number of policies in force exceeds the total population.

Last year American policyholders and their beneficiaries were paid $1,350,000,000 by the life insurance companies. Death claims were paid to the beneficiaries of 500,000 insured persons. In 20 years more than $14,000,000,000 has been paid to policy holders and their beneficiaries—about $6,000,000,000 in death claims and $8,000,000,000 to living policyholders.

One of the services which life insurance companies render the public in addition to paying death benefits and acting as savings banks, so to speak, is illustrated by a housing enterprise in New York. The law of that state limited life insurance real estate holdings practically to the real estate needed for their own occupancy in the conduct of their own business, but when there was a serious shortage of cheap housing about five years ago the legislature amended that law in an unusual fashion. It did not authorize the life insurance companies to go as far as they liked in the matter of acquiring real estate nor did it encourage them in the erection of skyscrapers for big business or high rental apartments for the wealthy class.

Instead the legislature authorized the companies to own real estate upon which there should be erected dwelling houses or apartments to be rented for not to exceed nine dollars per room per month. That is regarded as an extremely low rent. One company undertook the experiment, Mr. Lincoln relates, and constructed

The present Nicaragua situation is clearly shown in a document recently made public by the State Department. It is a letter delivered to Gen. Moncada, "rebel war chief," by Henry L. Stimson, President Coolidge's special envoy to Nicaragua. It reads:

"Concerning our conversation this morning, I have the honor to inform you that I am authorized to say that the president of the United States intends to accept the request of the Nicaragua government to supervise the election of 1928; that the retention of President Diaz during the remainder of his term is regarded as essential to that plan and will be insisted upon; that a general disarmament of the country also is regarded as necessary for the proper and successful conduct of such election, and that the forces of the United States will be authorized to accept the custody of the arms of those willing to lay them down, including the government, and to disarm forcibly those who will not do so."

This, of course, means frank intervention. Our government has intervened in Nicaragua and stopped the fighting and is going to disarm anybody on either side who starts anything, including the forces of the Diaz government which our government is upholding. More American marines are sent to enforce this policy. Uncle Sam is to remain in Nicaragua and supervise a new election next year. After that—well it depends on circumstances.

Some call this 'the new Monroe Doctrine." Some don't call it anything, but say it's necessary, to keep the peace in the continental neighborhood and safeguard the Panama canal. Others object. It will doubtless afford a fruitful topic for argument when congress meets again.

Windshield Warnings

Motorists breaking traffic rules are treated to a new kind of warning in Weston, Ont. Slips have been prepared on which all the usual traffic rules are printed. In case of infraction, one of these comprehensive slips is pasted on the erring driver's windshield, with the particular rule he has broken underlined. There is a postscript at the bottom stating that a second offense will mean arrest.

This ought to have a wholesome effect, and should be welcomed by motorists capable of taking a friendly hint.

There may be complications, however. A driver, after being subjected to this treatment, may be inclined to proceed through town with eyes glued to the list of traffic rules, instead of watching the traffic itself. Pasting anything on the windshield is not sanctioned much in this country any more. By distracting the attention of drivers and obscuring their view, it causes many mishaps.

RICHARD DIX AT CERAMIC

"Knockout Reilly" Opens Engagement on Monday.

Starred in a fast moving film of a young steel puddler whose ability with his fists wins him fistic fame, and the girl of his dreams, Richard Dix arrives at the Ceramic theatre Monday.

"Knockout Reilly," is the name of his latest Paramount screen effort, and it is reputed by those in the know, to be the most engrossing Dix offering ever. Reports from the large centers indicate an enthusiastic reception of the picture, and critics are putting it on a par with the "Quarterback," his famous football film.

As Dundee Reilly, Dix works in a steel mill and on Saturday night goes out in search of a little recreation and romance. Although professing utter disregard of all girls, he is immensely flattered when he receives a message purporting to be from Mary Malone, (Mary Brian) pretty entertainer in a cabaret that he and his friends frequent. The message invites him backstage to meet her, and not knowing that this is a little joke of his friends, he leaves his table and goes to her dressing room. He finds there Killer Agerra (Jack Renault), champion pugilist making advances to Mary and without knowing who he is knocks him out. Later Agerra reciprocates by decoying Reilly to his gymnasium and bearing him up. Reilly looking for revenue puts himself in the hands of Pat Malone, Mary's brother, himself a former pugilist, for training and rapidly rises to gladiatorial eminence. Complications set in and Reilly on the eve of a championship fight with Agerra finds himself railroaded to prison for two years for felonious assault. How he manages to keep in condition notwithstanding his confinement, and how on his release he clears his name, and wins the girl and the championship, are unfolded in a series of dramatic scenes in which the light humorous touch of director Malcolm St. Clair is always evident. Events move rapidly to a smashing denouement, in which Dix proves again that he is an athlete as well as an actor of versatility.

Do you know who the bride and groom will be at Rock Springs wedding, opening day?

apartment buildings that have proved to be excellent investments in addition to affording modern, pleasant, and attractive homes for a great many people. Rented within the limits prescribed by law, these apartments have yielded a net return of 8:8 per cent, of which the company credits 6 per cent to interest on its investment and sets aside 2.8 per cent to amortize the cost of the enterprise.

Longevity and Cheaper Rates.

Insurance companies, or those who control them, naturally are interested in seeing people enjoy good health and live long, and they have found it "good business" to do all in their power to bring that about. This brings them into the field of welfare work.

"Life insurance is inseparably associated with length of life," says Mr. Lincoln. "The longer people live, the cheaper life insurance becomes for all. The longer people live and are able to follow their accustomed pursuits, the greater is the asset of human values in th enation's balance sheet. The longer good health and activity continue, the greater the sum total of happiness and their families.

"These conclusions, give them separately what weight you will, have led to the concept of longevity as a proper aim of life insurance company service. The field is large and its cultivation is hardly more than begun, but remarkable achievements have already demonstrated the soundness of the attempt."

Mr. Lincoln cites one company which reports that the average length of life among its policyholders in the United States and Canada has increased nine years during the last 15 years in which it has maintained a nursing service and distributed welfare literature. Its figures show that there were in 1926 63,330 fewer deaths among its policyholders than would have been the case had the death rate of 1911 prevailed, and statisticians have made a computation showing a saving of 417,628 lives in the 15-year period, which, translated into death claims, means a saving of $71,550,000.

Insofar as life insurance has contributed to the public health through its constant fight against preventable disease and death, through campaigns of education, through periodical examinations of individuals, through promotion of community health, through demonstrations, surveys, and research work, its service to the public is something unknown in the experience of any other country in any period of history.

And it is pointed out, further, that this service is not limited to the individuals with whom the companies have direct policyholder relations.

"While serving them primarily and preeminently," says Mr. Lincoln, "life insurance carries its beneficial help into every community and every home through the support extended by investments in public and private securities and through its notable work in behalf of the physical well-being and improvement of our population as a whole."

FLOYD STREITENBERGER DEFENSE WILL REST MONDAY

EX-DETECTIVE CHARACTERIZES MAZER AS 'LIAR'

Canton Man Denies any Complicity in Mellett Murder.

WIFE ON STAND

Jury Probably Will Get Case Late Tuesday.

CANTON, O., May 14.—Promising to be the shortest of the Don R. Mellett murder cases to date, trial of Floyd E. Streitenberger, ex-police officer of Canton, charged with first degree murder, for alleged complicity in the killing of the youthful publisher of the Canton Daily News here last July 16, will enter the final stages Monday, when the defense is expected to rest. The jury of nine men and three women will probably get the case Tuesday.

Court was adjourned late Friday, over the week-end, after both prosecution and defense had agreed to the intermission.

Taking the stand in his own behalf, Friday afternoon, Streitenberger denied every charge of the state. He declared he never held enmity against Don Mellett, the slain editor, denied ever seeing Patrick McDermott, convicted slayer of Mellett, previous to McDermott's trial, and denied discussing with Louis Mazer, former East Liverpool resident, any plan of attack on the publisher. He characterized Mazer as a "liar and a no-account bootlegger."

Repartee With Prosecutor.

Jointly indicted for the crime, Mazer turned state's evidence and the prosecution is said to base its strongest hope for conviction of the former detective, on his testimony.

Streitenberger asserted Mellett's editorials concerning him 'had not worried me any," and that he "didn't think much about them."

Mrs. Streitenberger, the defendant's wife, formerly of Wellsville, preceded her husband on the stand and engaged in some lively repartee with Prosecutor Henry Harter.

Harter asked Mrs. Streitenberger why she had invited Sadie Cook, alleged narcotic law violator, of Canton, to visit the Streitenberger home in Springfield, O.

"Because I would have been glad to meet anybody from Canton," the witness replied.

"Even me, I suppose?" said Harter with a trace of sarcasm.

"Yes, even you," Mrs. Streitenberger answered with an emphasis on the "even."

Woman's Letter Introduced.

An objection by the defense to admitting as evidence a letter written by Mrs. Streitenberger to the Cook woman, was overruled. Among other things, the letter stated that they (Streitenbergers) "noticed there was plenty of trouble in Canton, and that we expect to be drawn into it."

Mrs. Streitenberger admitted writing the letter.

"Looks Like Cal And Al," Figures Chauncey M. Depew

WASHINGTON, May 14.—"It looks like Cal and Al."

That's the way Chauncey M. Depew, veteran New York senator, figures the 1928 presidential race.

Here on his annual visit to the capital, the ex-senator said he believed there was no doubt about President Coolidge being renominated and he believed Gov. Al Smith was the logical Democratic nominee.

He predicted prohibition will not be an issue.

their search for documents which might establish a propaganda plot against the British government. The search also was for at least one important official document missing from British government archives.

Scotland Yard decided to cut through the wall when the Soviet representatives refused to surrender the keys to the room, claiming diplomatic immunity.

Fifty detectives, assisted by foreign office linguists and reinforced by scores of uniformed police, remained in control of Soviet House, headquarters of Arcos, Ltd., (all Russian cooperative society), while the seized documents, weighing seven tons, were being sorted and examined.

The act of breaking into the Soviet House vault seemed to make it clear that the government does not intend to recognize the demand of the Soviet trade delegation for diplomatic immunity. On the other hand the government was apparently determined to examine every inch of space and every scrap of paper, meanwhile exhausting every effort to recover the missing government document or prove that it had found its way into the hands of the Soviets.

The keen international interest in the dramatic contest to span the Atlantic in single jump is shown by the great numbers of messages being received from all parts of the world. News from Paris shows that the Americans will get a great and friendly reception if they make the flight successfully.

Fire Chief Bryan's Pittsburgh Trip Proves Very Costly

Fire Chief Thomas Bryan's visit to Pittsburgh on Thursday proved to be costly.

Bryan left a package containing two shirts and two neckties, valued at $14, in his auto which was parked in Fourth avenue. When he returned 10 minutes later the package was gone.

Bryan reported the theft to the Pittsburgh detective bureau.

200 ENROLLED IN AUTO CLUB

Approximately 200 new members were enrolled in the Columbiana County Motor club during the first week of the drive which opened last Monday. More than one-half of the new members are East Liverpool car owners.

The campaign was to end next Thursday but it may be continued for a few days longer. A $1,000 accident policy is given each new member.

A meeting of the board of directors will be held in the office of Herman Armstrong, Lisbon, Monday evening.

Flood Relief Fund Here Hits $3,000 As Drive Closes

The Mississippi valley flood relief fund passed the $3,000 mark here today, the close of the campaign.

Actual cash turned over to W. E. Dunlap, treasurer of the Red Cross chapter, totalled $2,919.07. This does not include $110 which was taken in at a benefit performance given at the American theatre last week.

Dunlap will send the balance in the fund to national Red Cross headquarters next week.

Dorothy Mackaye Pictures Slain Man As Wife Beater

LOS ANGELES, May 14.—Ray Raymond, musical comedy star, for whose death Paul Kelly, film actor, is on trial for murder, was pictured today as a drunkard and a wife beater.

The description was supplied by Raymond's widow, Dorothy Mackaye, stage actress, for whose love, the state charges, the strapping Kelly slew the song-and-dance man with his fists.

LOS ANGELES, May 14.—Dorothy Mackaye, stage actress and central figure in the Paul Kelly murder trial, issued a statement through her attorney today denying charges that she and Ray Raymond, for whose death the film player is on trial, were not legally married.

NEW YORK, May 14.—Florence Bain Raymond declared today that she is the real wife of Ray Raymond, the actor, for whose murder Paul Kelly is on trial at Los Angeles.

Mrs. Raymond claims that if Raymond and Dorothy Mackaye, a central figure in the tragedy, were married the marriage was not legal. The New York Mrs. Raymond said she and Raymond were married at Newark, N. J., on January 8, 1909, and were never divorced.

Tris Speaker Day Observed in Game On Cleveland Field

CLEVELAND, May 14.—Returning to Dunn field in the uniform of the enemy, for the first time in many years, Tris Speaker, former manager and star centerfielder for the Cleveland Indians, now playing for Clark Griffith on the Washington American League team, will face a four-day fanfare of reception and fete in his honor, starting with today's scheduled presentation of honors preceding the opening of the Senators-Indian game this afternoon.

He may be an enemy but he is still Tris Speaker, and fans have not forgotten.

City Manager W. R. Hopkins declared a half-holiday and issued a special notice calling attention to "Speaker Day."

Many gifts will be presented to "Gray Eagle" as he is affectionately known to fans, and Masonic units, Elks, and other lodges will take part in the festivities.

OHIOAN CRUSHED BY FLYWHEEL

ZANESVILLE, O., May 14.—William O. Butler, 47, of Mount Sterling, was dead today, as the result of injuries sustained when he fell into the flywheel of a sawmill engine, while standing on a pulley over the machine, making repairs. Ruins of a Buick coupe, belonging to Dr. M. C. McCandless, Lisbon veterinerian, stolen from the Crubaugh-Chevrolet garage on the Lincoln highway, south of Lisbon, Wednesday night, were found between Canton and Massillon, today, where fire had destroyed the car.

Roscoe Meyers, 914 Railroad street, was crushed about the chest while at work on the new No. 7 plant of the Homer Laughlin China company, Newell, this morning. He was employed by the Austin company, Cleveland contractors. He was removed to the City hospital where he received medical attention.

Rini Will Appeal

that no malice had been shown on the part of Rini, and that the verdict should not have been more than manslaughter. They also charged the verdict was against the weight of the evidence.

Referring to Mrs. Chorgas' testimony that Rini "was angry," O'Grady said:

"She is the person who, if the prosecuting attorney had not asked the jury to return a verdict of not guilty, would now be the defendant and the argument on a motion for a new trial would be in her behalf. She was the only possible one to commit the crime.

"We feel that the rights of Rini have been prejudiced by the prosecutor in asking the jury to acquit this woman. The prosecutor was afraid to leave the matter in the hands of the jury. I have a letter that passed between Marie and her sister, Rosie, the wife of Rini, and her evidence has been suppressed because we have not been able to place her on the stand. And we telegraphed her money to come, but we did not get our wish."

Prosecutor Answers O'Grady.

Prosecutor Brookes took strong exceptions to the remark that evidence had been suppressed. He then told the court that O'Grady had talked to Mrs. Chorgas at the county jail, and told her to "stick to the first story" and to make no reference to the cut on her wrist. Argument between counsel became heated, and Judge Lones cautioned both to "stick to the case and the motion."

Knepper advised the court it was he who phrased the text of the motion for a new trial, and this was done in the absence of O'Grady who was in Buffalo, N. Y.

"The claim of counsel of the supposed suppression of evidence amounts to nothing," Judge Lones said.

"They have not put up anything to support the motion," Brookes said. "The wound that caused the death of Patsy Anania is one that was made by a man who knows how to use a knife. A penknife was used. Sal Rini was the only one physically able to deliver the blow. Patsy Anania was a boxer and was without a chance to defend himself when he received the knife thrust. It could not have been a wound inflicted with suicidal intent, neither was it an accident. We see no error, and move for sentence."

New Trial Denied.

"Patsy Anania was killed or murdered in an apartment in East Liverpool," Judge Lones said. "Only two persons were present other than Anania. There was no evidence introduced during the trial of this case to show, and it is highly improbable, that he committed suicide, or that it was accidental.

"The jury are the whole judges of the facts. The court charges the law. The jury heard Marie Chorgas testify on the witness stand and she testified that she did not commit the act. The Defendant Rini also testified that he did not do it. The court was of the opinion there was sufficient evidence to convict Rini without the testimony of Marie Chorgas. There was testimony offered during the trial of a quarrel between the two men. The blow was more probably inflicted by a man than a woman. The wound inself indicates that the stab was delivered with great force to produce the result it did.

"Whether the Defendant Rini was guilty was a matter for the jury. The court is not likely to set aside the verdict of the jury, and the court is of the opinion the jury is right.

"The rights of the defendant were fully protected by able counsel. The question of manslaughter or second degree murder is also a question for the jury. Strong evidence of malice is the use of a weapon. One life has been destroyed—blotted out—which means suffering to the family of the deceased and also the very worthy family of Defendant Rini. Crime cannot be left unpunished. I believe no error has been committed, and that the defendant's rights have been fully protected. I am obliged to overrule a motion for a new trial."

Family Says "Goodbye."

Brookes then moved that sentence be passed.

"You may stand up," the court said to Rini.

After asking the usual question, Judge Lones said:

"It is the sentence of the court that you be sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary, and there confined during your natural life."

"Exceptions will be noted, and your record is preserved in the event you desire to appeal," Judge Lones said to O'Grady.

"We'll carry this case to the supreme court if we can get in," Knepper declared. "We certainly will go into the court of appeals."

In the custody of Deputy Sheriff Lawrence Kindsvatter, Rini was taken into the jury room to talk with his relatives.

Ruth Snyder Penitent

Mrs. Snyder from the chair as seen in a statement issued by Mrs. Virginia Peters Parkhurst, Maryland, state director of the Susan B. Anthony foundation and a former candidate for the United States congress. She said the only question involved in the imposition of the death penalty in this case was "just how far backward does legalized murder take us into the age of cannibalism and into the age of blind reasoning founded upon a principle of barbarous retaliation."

Another to voice opposition to the death penalty was Justice Townsend Scudder who said he did not believe the state has the right to take human life.

The doomed woman has received scores of letters in which the writers promised to appeal to the governor for commutation of sentence.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKETS

NEW YORK, May 14.—Spirited bidding for the high-priced market "sensations" in the railroad, equipment, and specialty stocks constituted the principal feature of the short session of the market today.

Baldwin Locomotive, Nickel Plate Railroad common, Houston Oil and Coca Cola were the leaders in the new forward movement, but various market specialties in which a large short interest was supposed to be "locked up" in a terrific struggle with the bullish pools, were also pushed forward vigorously. As in the last two or three sessions, industrial and business news played an insignificant part in the movements of prices, the weekly trade reviews reporting considerable unsettlement in business.

Baldwin's 6-point jump to a record high price of 205½ in the first half-hour was attributed to pool activities, in which a group of powerful Chicago speculators hold the whip hand. Since only 200,000 shares of stock have been issued for Baldwin, the market supply is extremely small, and the stock lends itself easily to manipulation by powerful professionals or groups. Valuable property rights rather than big earnings and a liberal dividend policy constitute the only basis for the speculative demand for the stock.

Stock of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad pushed above 180 for the first time in the history of the road. Nickel Plate also bettered yesterday's best price by a point or two while Erie, Reading and other well-known railroad stocks were buoyant.

A 5 per cent increase in bank clearings, compared with the same week last year, considered in conjunction with the weekly increase in car loadings, was regarded as evidence of the healthy condition of general business, even though the weekly trade reviews found considerable spottiness in the domestic trade situation. The floods and the unseasonable weather are still a handicap to southern trade and production, the latter including the crop situation in the cotton and wheat belts.

Producers and refiners joined Houston Oil in the "rampage" of favored oil stocks, the balance of the oils display a reactionary tone when it was discovered that a number of the semi-nole producers are not inclined to unite in the curtainment program agreed upon at a conference in New York this week. Producers and refiners, controlled by Humble Oil company has only a few shares in the available "floating" supply.

Week-end selling of cotton and grain in New York and outside markets resulted in a moderate decline in prices, but the commodity markets as a whole were steady, with few changes of importance.

FLOYD STREITENBERGER DEFENSE WILL REST MONDAY

EX-DETECTIVE CHARACTERIZES MAZER AS 'LIAR'

Canton Man Denies any Complicity in Mellett Murder.

WIFE ON STAND

Jury Probably Will Get Case Late Tuesday.

CANTON, O., May 14.—Promising to be the shortest of the Don R. Mellett murder cases to date, trial of Floyd E. Streitenberger, ex-police officer of Canton, charged with first degree murder, for alleged complicity in the killing of the youthful publisher of the Canton Daily News here last July 16, will enter the final stages Monday, when the defense is expected to rest. The jury of nine men and three women will probably get the case Tuesday.

Court was adjourned late Friday, over the week-end, after both prosecution and defense had agreed to the intermission.

Taking the stand in his own behalf, Friday afternoon, Streitenberger denied every charge of the state. He declared he never held enmity against Don Mellett, the slain editor, denied ever seeing Patrick McDermott, convicted slayer of Mellett, previous to McDermott's trial, and denied discussing with Louis Mazer, former East Liverpool resident, any plan of attack on the publisher. He characterized Mazer as a "liar and a no-account bootlegger."

Repartee With Prosecutor.

Jointly indicted for the crime, Mazer turned state's evidence and the prosecution is said to base its strongest hope for conviction of the former detective, on his testimony.

Streitenberger asserted Mellett's editorials concerning him 'had not worried me any," and that he "didn't think much about them."

Mrs. Streitenberger, the defendant's wife, formerly of Wellsville, preceded her husband on the stand and engaged in some lively repartee with Prosecutor Henry Harter.

Harter asked Mrs. Streitenberger why she had invited Sadie Cook, alleged narcotic law violator, of Canton, to visit the Streitenberger home in Springfield, O.

"Because I would have been glad to meet anybody from Canton," the witness replied.

"Even me, I suppose?" said Harter with a trace of sarcasm.

Woman's Letter Introduced.

An objection by the defense to admitting as evidence a letter written by Mrs. Streitenberger to the Cook woman, was overruled. Among other things, the letter stated that they (Streitenbergers) "noticed there was plenty of trouble in Canton, and that we expect to be drawn into it."

Mrs. Streitenberger admitted writing the letter.

their search for documents which might establish a propaganda plot against the British government. The search also was for at least one important official document missing from British government archives.

Scotland Yard decided to cut through the wall when the Soviet representatives refused to surrender the keys to the room, claiming diplomatic immunity.

Fifty detectives, assisted by foreign office linguists and reinforced by scores of uniformed police, remained in control of Soviet House, headquarters of Arcos, Ltd., (all Russian cooperative society), while the seized documents, weighing seven tons, were being sorted and examined.

The act of breaking into the Soviet House vault seemed to make it clear that the government does not intend to recognize the demand of the Soviet trade delegation for diplomatic immunity. On the other hand the government was apparently determined to examine every inch of space and every scrap of paper, meanwhile exhausting every effort to recover the missing government document or prove that it had found its way into the hands of the Soviets.

Rini Will Appeal

that no malice had been shown on the part of Rini, and that the verdict should not have been more than manslaughter. They also charged the verdict was against the weight of the evidence.

Referring to Mrs. Chorgas' testimony that Rini "was angry," O'Grady said:

"She is the person who, if the prosecuting attorney had not asked the jury to return a verdict of not guilty, would now be the defendant and the argument on a motion for a new trial would be in her behalf. She was the only possible one to commit the crime.

"We feel that the rights of Rini have been prejudiced by the prosecutor in asking the jury to acquit this woman. The prosecutor was afraid to leave the matter in the hands of the jury. I have a letter that passed between Marie and her sister, Rosie, the wife of Rini, and her evidence has been suppressed because we have not been able to place her on the stand. And we telegraphed her money to come, but we did not get our wish."

Prosecutor Answers O'Grady.

Prosecutor Brookes took strong exceptions to the remark that evidence had been suppressed. He then told the court that O'Grady had talked to Mrs. Chorgas at the county jail, and told her to "stick to the first story" and to make no reference to the cut on her wrist. Argument between counsel became heated, and Judge Lones cautioned both to "stick to the case and the motion."

Knepper advised the court it was he who phrased the text of the motion for a new trial, and this was done in the absence of O'Grady who was in Buffalo, N. Y.

"The claim of counsel of the supposed suppression of evidence amounts to nothing," Judge Lones said.

"They have not put up anything to support the motion," Brookes said. "The wound that caused the death of Patsy Anania is one that was made by a man who knows how to use a knife. A penknife was used. Sal Rini was the only one physically able to deliver the blow. Patsy Anania was a boxer and was without a chance to defend himself when he received the knife thrust. It could not have been a wound inflicted with suicidal intent, neither was it an accident. We see no error, and move for sentence."

New Trial Denied.

"Patsy Anania was killed or murdered in an apartment in East Liverpool," Judge Lones said. "Only two persons were present other than Anania. There was no evidence introduced during the trial of this case to show, and it is highly improbable, that he committed suicide, or that it was accidental.

"The jury are the whole judges of the facts. The court charges the law. The jury heard Marie Chorgas testify on the witness stand and she testified that she did not commit the act. The Defendant Rini also testified that he did not do it. The court was of the opinion there was sufficient evidence to convict Rini without the testimony of Marie Chorgas. There was testimony offered during the trial of a quarrel between the two men. The blow was more probably inflicted by a man than a woman. The wound in-self indicates that the stab was delivered with great force to produce the result it did.

"Whether the Defendant Rini was guilty was a matter for the jury. The court is not likely to set aside the verdict of the jury, and the court is of the opinion the jury is right.

"The rights of the defendant were fully protected by able counsel. The question of manslaughter or second degree murder is also a question for the jury. Strong evidence of malice is the use of a weapon. One life has been destroyed—blotted out—which means suffering to the family of the deceased and also the very worthy family of Defendant Rini. Crime cannot be left unpunished. I believe no error has been committed, and that the defendant's rights have been fully protected. I am obliged to overrule a motion for a new trial."

Family Says "Goodbye."

Brookes then moved that sentence be passed.

"You may stand up," the court said to Rini.

After asking the usual question, Judge Lones said:

"It is the sentence of the court that you be sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary, and there confined during your natural life."

"Exceptions will be noted, and your record is preserved in the event you desire to appeal," Judge Lones said to O'Grady.

"We'll carry this case to the supreme court if we can get in," Knepper declared. "We certainly will go into the court of appeals."

In the custody of Deputy Sheriff Lawrence Kindsvatter, Rini was taken into the jury room to talk with his relatives.

Congratulations are due Secretary of War Davis for his mobilization of airplanes at San Antonio from all over the country. With no fatal accident, 103 planes have gathered at the rendezvous, flying a total of more than 200,000 miles. And when the fliers return to their bases the total flight will exceed 400,000 miles.

Especially gratifying was the achievement of the swift pursuit plane formation, the fliers driving on through fog and storm, 1,300 miles in one day, the longest flight ever accomplished by so large a body of fliers.

Non bis in idem, is a motto worth remembering.

Each generation should have its own ideas. When his congregation in the lowlands, near Parkins, Arkansas, were told by their pastor that a flood was coming, and they should build an ark, they hastily built one, and crowded into it, with pigs, chickens, mules, wives and children.

Sure enough the flood came, crawling over the land, and the colored pastor stood high in the estimation of his flock, rejoicing in the ark.

Then, alas, water poured in through many leaks. The hull was not caulked, and the ark would not float. When the water rose a foot and a half the congregation waded to a railroad embankment and decided that theirs was a different flood.

Experts from New Foundland give faint hope that Nungesser and his companion may be alive. If, by good fortune, they have landed in New Foundland, it might take many days for them to reach a settlement.

Hardy, courageous men, they would be able to endure and survive great hardships.

From St. Landry, the second largest cotton producing parish in Louisiana, the waters will flow to Ibera, which houses about 26,000; St. Martin, 22,000; Assumption, 15,000; Iberville, 27,000, and St. Mary, 3,100, and so to the sea.

The Moreauville crevasse, which began yesterday morning as a 150-foot gap poured off a seven-foot wall of water over a stretch more than 800 feet wide. Property losses in the southern parishes must reach at least $5,000,000, according to state agricultural surveys.

Distribute Rescue Craft.

Although thousands had disregarded the evacuation warning of the relief agencies throughout the region south of the Bayou Des Glaises, the strategic distribution of rescue craft along the Old and Red rivers is believed to have averted loss of life.

Several negroes who had remained too long at work on the sliding levees were given first aid treatment on coast guard patrol boats last night, but no death had been reported today from the newly stricked region.

One question for each day is provided. The parent will find it interesting and helpful to have the child take up the question each day and aid it in finding the answer in the Scriptures, thus developing a knowledge of the Bible and where to find in it the things decided. Send or bring the little folks to the class Sunday at 1:45 p. m. The "Ceramic Cafeteria Auditorium," 121 West Fifth Street.

653. Why should the church class be represented by the first river that is mentioned?

Answer: Because they are the first ones that get eternal life. (Revelation 20:67. They are to have part in "the first resurrection." See also Hebrews 11:39, 40.

654. In Revelation 7:4; 14:1 it is shown that of the true church class there will be 144,000 and in Revelation 3:20 it is shown that these will "sit in the throne"—they are to be the kings or rulers over the earth. What is said about another classes in Revelation 7:9-17?

Answer: "And, lo, I behold a great multitude which no man could number . . . stood before the throne," etc. The 15th verse shows that they are not in the throne but "before the throne," and that they serve God day and night in the temple. They are to be servants and not kings. Nevertheless, they are to be very happy. See verses 16 and 17.

655. What third class is mentioned in the 11th chapter of Hebrews?

Answer: The ancient worthies—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, all the other faithful ones who lived before Christ.

656. Are they to have a different resurrection than the world in general?

Answer: They are to have "a better resurrection" than the world in general (Hebrews 11:35), and yet it is not as good as the church will receive. See Hebrews 11:39, 40.

657. Were their promises heavenly or earthly promise?

Answer: They were all earthly. See, for example the promise made to Abraham in Genesis 13:12, 14, 15.

658. Are they to "be made perfect," and if so, they will be perfect as what?

Answer: Yes, they shall "be made perfect" (Hebrews 11:40) and this perfection will be that of human beings because they were not promisd a heavenly reward, but an earthly one.

659. What fourth class does "the great river Euphrates" (Rev. 16:12) seem to symbolize?

Answer: We believe it symbolizes those of the great world of mankind who set themselves apart to do the Lord's will, when they hear, during the reign of Christ, the wonderful story of God's great love for them and the provisions He has made in Christ for them. Theirs will not be "a resurrection of (perfect) life," but instead theirs will be "a resurrection of judgment." See John 5:28, 29 R. V. That is to say, they will be put on trial for eevrlasting life and not get perfect life at once like the other three classes.

One question for each day is provided. The parent will find it interesting and helpful to have the child take up the question each day and aid it in finding the answer in the Scriptures, thus developing a knowledge of the Bible and where to find in it the things decided. Send or bring the little folks to the class Sunday at 1:45 p. m. The "Ceramic Cafeteria Auditorium," 121 West Fifth Street.

653. Why should the church class be represented by the first river that is mentioned?

Answer: Because they are the first ones that get eternal life. (Revelation 20:67. They are to have part in "the first resurrection." See also Hebrews 11:39, 40.

654. In Revelation 7:4; 14:1 it is shown that of the true church class there will be 144,000 and in Revelation 3:20 it is shown that these will "sit in the throne"—they are to be the kings or rulers over the earth. What is said about another classes in Revelation 7:9-17?

Answer: "And, lo, I behold a great multitude which no man could number . . . stood before the throne," etc. The 15th verse shows that they are not in the throne but "before the throne," and that they serve God day and night in the temple. They are to be servants and not kings. Nevertheless, they are to be very happy. See verses 16 and 17.

655. What third class is mentioned in the 11th chapter of Hebrews?

Answer: The ancient worthies—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, all the other faithful ones who lived before Christ.

656. Are they to have a different resurrection than the world in general?

Answer: They are to have "a better resurrection" than the world in general (Hebrews 11:35), and yet it is not as good as the church will receive. See Hebrews 11:39, 40.

657. Were their promises heavenly or earthly promise?

Answer: They were all earthly. See, for example the promise made to Abraham in Genesis 13:12, 14, 15.

658. Are they to "be made perfect," and if so, they will be perfect as what?

Answer: Yes, they shall "be made perfect" (Hebrews 11:40) and this perfection will be that of human beings because they were not promisd a heavenly reward, but an earthly one.

659. What fourth class does "the great river Euphrates" (Rev. 16:12) seem to symbolize?

Answer: We believe it symbolizes those of the great world of mankind who set themselves apart to do the Lord's will, when they hear, during the reign of Christ, the wonderful story of God's great love for them and the provisions He has made in Christ for them. Theirs will not be "a resurrection of (perfect) life," but instead theirs will be "a resurrection of judgment." See John 5:28, 29 R. V. That is to say, they will be put on trial for eevrlasting life and not get perfect life at once like the other three classes.

Old Jerusalem Rocked By Mysterious Phenomenon

Strange Spiritual Outburst, Without Precedent, Set City Into Commotion, and Established Christian Church on New Course of Conquest.

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

We do not know of a certainty even the dates of all the nine different occasions throughout the centuries upon which the City of Jeruslaem was completely destroyed; but the whole civilized world keeps count of the strange experiences wherein the infant Christian Church was set ablaze by the mysterious fires of Pentecost. Such are the vivid contrasts between what is material and what is spiritual. Life's real milestones are always something that has happened within the heart of man. Beliefs are more powerful than armies. As a matter of demonstrable experience, faith's victories outrank those of force. Pentecost has meant more to the world than the conquests of Sargon or Rameses the Great or Alexander or Julius on which the City of Jerusalem was Caesar or Jenghis Khan or Napoleon.

Nobody can explain Pentecost: we can only record it. Certainly something happened at the first great Jewish Festival in Jerusalem following the Crucifixion. That something happened in particular to Peter, who is the central figure of this course of Lessons, and also to the whole Christian company. And the consequences of that something are still a traceable influence in the whole world.

"Oh What a Change."

Let us get hold of that clear-cut fact. After the arrest of Jesus, Peter had been down and out, a scared, swearing, heart-broken renegade. All of his bombast had been deflated. Then followed the marvel—as incredible to the disciples as it has been to any sceptic since—of the Resurrection. That miracle revived the fainting hearts of the scattered flock. Again and again the Risen Christ appeared to them. Once more the company cohered. They clung to the proved wonder of the Resurrection as they had once clung to their Lord in person. It welded them into oneness. A common grief and a common task made them a community of love. Thenceforth life offered them principally an opportunity to carry on as representatives of their risen Lord.

Contrast all that with a contemporary situation. High brows are wrinkled these days over the apaprent moral slump in the circles of educated young people, as illustrated by the student suicides. Clearly, learning of itself does not necessarily carry with it a moral uplift. An increasing number of sober observers are questioning the vital power of mere education and "progress" and social advancemen.

Yet now, as at Pentecost, the truth of the Resurrection, and of the enduement from above, is making over ugly lives into loveliness; timid lives into heroism; selfish lives into vicariousness. The change in Peter and his companions was no greater than the change in individual persons known to us in our own neighborhood, and in Christian converts in Uganda and China and Persia and Egypt. Characters are changed by Christ. The Gospel, sincerely stated and truly accepted, does transform men and women and communities.

Though all the world totters, let us hold fast to this central effect of the Christian religion. There is a cure for souls with Christ. All that is seriously wrong with human society, with human homes, with human lives, may be made right by the coming of the Saviour. The power that lifted Peter up from the slough of denial in the courtyard of Caiapas to the heights of Pentecost, still persists and prevails.

When Tongues of Fire Fell.

Those early Christians were fond of getting together, as folk who are congenial in essential things always are. There was no need of an advertising, "Go-To-Church Campaign," to call the disciples to their assemblies. This simple, brotherly unity is the first fact to be noted in this miracle of Pentecost which is our Lesson. And while they were met, here is what befell—I quote the Moffatt Translation:

> "Suddenly there came a sound from heaven like a violent blast of wind, which filled the whole house where they were seated. They saw tongues like flames distributing themselves, one resting on the head of each, and they were all filled with the holy Spirit—they began to speak in foreign tongues, as the Spirit enabled them to express themselves. Now there were devout Jews from every nation under heaven staying in Jerusalem. So when this sound was heard, the multitude gathered in bewilderment, for each heard them speaking in his own language. All were amazed and astonished."

A miracle. Of course: what occasion better merited a miracle than the formal fulfilment of the promise of Christ that He would send His Spirit upon His friends? This was the inauguration of the Church Militant. Herein was the empowerment of Christianity for its world task.

That the roar and commotion of it should shake the city was amazing, yet logical. This was the beginning of a new era in the spiritual life of mankind. The supreme mystery of the Lord's promised Other Self, the Paraclete, was fulfilled at Pentecost. Signs and wonders attended it, which is only commensarate with the importance of the event. If God is ever to display His peculiar power on earth, what occasion could better warrant it than this Day of Pentecost, when the Spirit descended in symbolic tongues of fire, quivering above the head of each disciple, to signify that henceforth the Church had found her voice for all races and peoples and nations?

Of course, Jerusalem was set by the ears. Everybody wondered. Men from far-flung Jewry, in the city for the festival, marvelled aloud at this demonstration of a universal-tongued fulfilment of prophecy. Scarcely had the old capital been so stirred even on the day of Crucifixion.

This was the original justification for a city-wide revival of religion. It was Scriptural, spiritual and sensational, turning hearers to self-examination, to contrition, confession and conversion. As I sat amidst a theatre full of hungry-hearted men and women, a few days ago, in a Lenten noon service, I pondered upon our failure to provide more mass opportunities for seeking spirits to find soul-satisfaction. When real religion speaks, everybody is ready to listen.

At Pentecost, it was Peter,—a new, rehabilitated, restored Peter, now sure of himself only because sure of his Lord, who had forgiven and commissioned him—who stood up to interpret the wonders of the occasion. What a spectacle of blazing bravery he was! This Book of Acts is the book of boldness, because a record of the doings of Spirit filled men. Timorous souls are made strong and fearless by a perusal of this record of what Pentecost did for a commonplace crowd of Christians. Courage in witness-bearing is a first fruit of spiritual power. Pentecost puts power into pulpits and pew.

While in Jerusalem, in 1919, I secured several olive-wood penholders, made by direction of Dr. John H. Finley, then Director of the American Red Cross in Palestine; and I have since done a large part of my writing with one of them. Each penholder was tipped with a red cross. I like the symbol. The pen that would write with power must bear the ensanguined cross; even as the sermon that would prevail must hold up the Cross of Christ.

Peter's great sermon at Pentecost was Christ-centered. It dwelt hardly at all upon the signs and marvels of the occasion, but went directly to a proclamation of the Redeemer. Fearlessly, Peter arraigned his hearers as those who had slain the Son of God. No preacher can prevail over hearers whom he pampers or fears. Scripture-saturated, the apostle's discourse centered upon Christ, the crucified. And it won three thousand converts in a day.

Ah, if the Christian Church—the sorely divided, contentious, world-tainted Church—could but again find her Pentecostal voice, and set forth Christ as the only Saviour and satisfaction for man's many needs, how quickly all lesser problems that puzzle our day would be solved! A clear presentation of the crucified, risen Redeemer is literally the greatest need of the world today.

To live content with small means; to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion; to be worthy, not respectable; and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages, with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never; in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious, grow up through the common—this is to be my symphony.—William Henry Channing.

CHURCH CORNER STONE SERVICE AT MIDLAND ON SUNDAY, MAY 22

Presbyterians Erecting $95,000 House of Worship.

$80,000 PLEDGED

Dr. Floyd W. Barr, Beaver Falls, to Deliver Address.

Corner stone of the new Midland Presbyterian church, being erected in Ohio avenue, opposite the Lincoln high school, will be placed in position at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, May 22.

The address will be delivered by Dr. Floyd W. Barr, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Beaver Falls. Special music will be a feature. Rev. Charles W. Cochran, pastor of the church, will be in charge of the ceremonies.

The new church and manse and the lot will cost approximately $95,000. Members and their friends have pledged $46,000 on a 50-month payment plan. From the sale of the old church property $19,000 was realized, while the Beaver presbytery contributed $10,000 and officers of the Crucible Steel company, $5,000, a total of $80,000.

The new church will be white stone in construction, while the manse adjoining will be stucco and trimmed in stone. Seating capacity of the main auditorium in the house of worship will be 300. It will have a basement and a Sunday school room, also. The manse will have eight rooms and a bath.

The Cook-Anderson company, of Beaver, holds the contract for the church parsonage, while Herbert McCullough, Pittsburgh, is the architect. The church will be ready for occupancy on or about January 1, 1928.

The Midland congregation was organized about 20 years ago, when a church and manse were erected at the corner of Seventh street and Penn avenue. This property was sold several months ago, the church to be the site of a proposed apartment building.

Since the first of the year the congregation has been conducting Sunday services in the State theatre.

Present membership of the church is 245.

Rev. Mr. Cochran came to Midland in January, 1926, from Summerville, Pa. He succeeded Rev. Grover C. Fohner, who resigned to become assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian church at New Castle, Pa.

Pending the razing of the old church at Seventh street and Penn avenue, it is being used as the Pentecostal mission.

Learning makes a good man better, and an ill man worse.—John Garth.

I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely.—Revelation 21:6.

Old friends, old scenes, will lovelier be,
As more of heaven in each we see;
Some softening gleam of love and prayer
Shall dawn on every cross and care.

Pentecost has meant more to the world than the conquests of Sargon or Rameses the Great or Alexander or Julius on which the City of Jerusalem was Caesar or Jenghis Khan or Napoleon.

Nobody can explain Pentecost: we can only record it. Certainly something happened at the first great Jewish Festival in Jerusalem following the Crucifixion. That something happened in particular to Peter, who is the central figure of this course of Lessons, and also to the whole Christian company. And the consequences of that something are still a traceable influence in the whole world.

"Oh What a Change."

Let us get hold of that clear-cut fact. After the arrest of Jesus, Peter had been down and out, a scared, swearing, heart-broken renegade. All of his bombast had been deflated. Then followed the marvel—as incredible to the disciples as it has been to any sceptic since—of the Resurrection. That miracle revived the fainting hearts of the scattered flock. Again and again the Risen Christ appeared to them. Once more the company cohered. They clung to the proved wonder of the Resurrection as they had once clung to their Lord in person. It welded them into oneness. A common grief and a common task made them a community of love. Thenceforth life offered them principally an opportunity to carry on as representatives of their risen Lord.

Contrast all that with a contemporary situation. High brows are wrinkled these days over the apaprent moral slump in the circles of educated young people, as illustrated by the student suicides. Clearly, learning of itself does not necessarily carry with it a moral uplift. An increasing number of sober observers are questioning the vital power of mere education and "progress" and social advancemen..

Yet now, as at Pentecost, the truth of the Resurrection, and of the enduement from above, is making over ugly lives into loveliness; timid lives into heroism; selfish lives into vicariousness. The change in Peter and his companions was no greater than the change in individual persons known to us in our own neighborhood, and in Christian converts in Uganda and China and Persia and Egypt. Characters are changed by Christ. The Gospel, sincerely stated and truly accepted, does transform men and women and communities.

Though all the world totters, let us hold fast to this central effect of the Christian religion. There is a cure for souls with Christ. All that is seriously wrong with human society, with human homes, with human lives, may be made right by the coming of the Saviour. The power that lifted Peter up from the slough of denial in the courtyard of Caiapas to the heights of Pentecost, still persists and prevails.

When Tongues of Fire Fell.

Those early Christians were fond of getting together, as folk who are congenial in essential things always are. There was no need of an advertising, "Go-To-Church Campaign," to call the disciples to their assemblies. This simple, brotherly unity is the first fact to be noted in this miracle of Pentecost which is our Lesson. And while they were met, here is what befell—I quote the Moffatt Translation:

> "Suddenly there came a sound from heaven like a violent blast of wind, which filled the whole house where they were seated. They saw tongues like flames distributing themselves, one resting on the head of each, and they were all filled with the holy Spirit—they began to speak in foreign tongues, as the Spirit enabled them to express themselves. Now there were devout Jews from every nation under heaven staying in Jerusalem. So when this sound was heard, the multitude gathered in bewilderment, for each heard them speaking in his own language. All were amazed and astonished."

A miracle. Of course: what occasion better merited a miracle than the formal fulfilment of the promise of Christ that He would send His Spirit upon His friends? This was the inauguration of the Church Militant. Herein was the empowerment of Christianity for its world task.

That the roar and commotion of it should shake the city was amazing, yet logical. This was the beginning of a new era in the spiritual life of mankind. The supreme mystery of the Lord's promised Other Self, the Paraclete, was fulfilled at Pentecost. Signs and wonders attended it, which is only commensarate with the importance of the event. If God is ever to display His peculiar power on earth, what occasion could better warrant it than this Day of Pentecost, when the Spirit descended in symbolic tongues of fire, quivering above the head of each disciple, to signify that henceforth the Church had found her voice for all races and peoples and nations?

Of course, Jerusalem was set by the ears. Everybody wondered. Men from far-flung Jewry, in the city for the festival, marveled aloud at this demonstration of a universal-tongued fulfilment of prophecy. Scarcely had the old capital been so stirred even on the day of Crucifixion.

This was the original justification for a city-wide revival of religion. It was Scriptural, spiritual and sensational, turning hearers to self-examination, to contrition, confession and conversion. As I sat amidst a theatre full of hungry-hearted men and women, a few days ago, in a Lenten noon service, I pondered upon our failure to provide more mass opportunities for seeking spirits to find soul-satisfaction. When real religion speaks, everybody is ready to listen.

At Pentecost, it was Peter,—a new, rehabilitated, restored Peter, now sure of himself only because sure of his Lord, who had forgiven and commissioned him—who stood up to interpret the wonders of the occasion. What a spectacle of blazing bravery he was! This Book of Acts is the book of boldness, because a record of the doings of Spirit-filled men. Timorous souls are made strong and fearless by a perusal of this record of what Pentecost did for a commonplace crowd of Christians. Courage in witness-bearing is a first fruit of spiritual power. Pentecost puts power into pulpits and pew.

While in Jerusalem, in 1919, I secured several olive-wood penholders, made by direction of Dr. John H. Finley, then Director of the American Red Cross in Palestine; and I have since done a large part of my writing with one of them. Each penholder was tipped with a red cross. I like the symbol. The pen that would write with power must bear the ensanguined cross; even as the sermon that would prevail must hold up the Cross of Christ.

Peter's great sermon at Pentecost was Christ-centered. It dwelt hardly at all upon the signs and marvels of the occasion, but went directly to a proclamation of the Redeemer. Fearlessly, Peter arraigned his hearers as those who had slain the Son of God. No preacher can prevail over hearers whom he pampers or fears. Scripture-saturated, the apostle's discourse centered upon Christ, the crucified. And it won three thousand converts in a day.

Ah, if the Christian Church—the sorely divided, contentious, world-tainted Church—could but again find her Pentecostal voice, and set forth Christ as the only Saviour and satisfaction for man's many needs, how quickly all lesser problems that puzzle our day would be solved! A clear presentation of the crucified, risen Redeemer is literally the greatest need of the world today.

To live content with small means; to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion; to be worthy, not respectable; and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages, with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never; in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious, grow up through the common—this is to be my symphony.—William Henry Channing.

A man that is young in years may be old in hours, if he has lost no time. —Francis Bacon.

Never ascribe to an opponent motives meaner than your own.—James M. Barrie.

Howe'er it be, it seems to me,
'Tis only noble to be good.

CHURCH CORNER STONE SERVICE AT MIDLAND ON SUNDAY, MAY 22

Presbyterians Erecting $95,000 House of Worship.

$80,000 PLEDGED

Dr. Floyd W. Barr, Beaver Falls, to Deliver Address.

Corner stone of the new Midland Presbyterian church, being erected in Ohio avenue, opposite the Lincoln high school, will be placed in position at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, May 22.

The address will be delivered by Dr. Floyd W. Barr, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Beaver Falls. Special music will be a feature. Rev. Charles W. Cochran, pastor of the church, will be in charge of the ceremonies.

The new church and manse and the lot will cost approximately $95,000. Members and their friends have pledged $46,000 on a 50 month pay ment plan. From the sale of the old church property $19,000 was realized, while the Beaver presbytery contributed $10,000 and officers of the Crucible Steel company, $5,000, a total of $80,000.

The new church will be white stone in construction, while the manse adjoining will be stucco and trimmed in stone. Seating capacity of the main auditorium in the house of worship will be 300. It will have a basement and a Sunday school room, also. The manse will have eight rooms and a bath.

The Cook-Anderson company, of Beaver, holds the contract for the church parsonage, while Herbert McCullough, Pittsburgh, is the architect. The church will be ready for occupancy on or about January 1, 1928.

The Midland congregation was organized about 20 years ago, when a church and manse were erected at the corner of Seventh street and Penn avenue. This property was sold several months ago, the church to be the site of a proposed apartment building.

Since the first of the year the congregation has been conducting Sunday services in the State theatre.

Present membership of the church is 245.

Rev. Mr. Cochran came to Midland in January, 1926, from Summerville, Pa. He succeeded Rev. Grover C. Fohner, who resigned to become assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian church at New Castle, Pa.

Pending the razing of the old church at Seventh street and Penn avenue, it is being used as the Pentecostal mission.

I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely.—Revelation 21:6.

Old friends, old scenes, will lovelier be,
As more of heaven in each we see;
Some softening gleam of love and prayer
Shall dawn on every cross and care.

STRAND OFFERS MODERN STORY

May McAvoy Heads Cast of "Matinee Ladies."

Romance—in the hearts of a Broadway gigolo and a cabaret cigarette girl. That is the subject matter of Warner Bros.' production of "Matinee Ladies," starring May McAvoy which comes to the Strand theatre on Monday.

Back of this romance is a picture of rich and fashionable wives who have lost interest in their fat and bald husbands and who yearn for amorous adventures with younger men during the long afternoons. This demand has been satisfied in New York where these matinee ladies are probably to be found in greatest abundance at the afternoon cabarets where impecunious young men who dance divinely are easy to meet.

Bob, played by Malcolm MacGregor, is one of thes easy-to-meet young men. The money he earns as a dancing man saves his college career when it seems that nothing can. Thus he meets the cabaret cigarette girl (May McAvoy). They fall in love, but each suspects the other. Can she love a dancing man? Is a cigarette girl in such a place worth his love? These were the questions which they ask themselves, but in the sweep of events such questions are soon overwhelmed by more vital consideration. Hedda Hopper, Richard Tucker, Margaret Seddon, Cissy Fitzgerald, and Jean Lefferty are seen in the supporting cast. Byron Haskins directed.

WASHINGTON STEWART'S LETTER.

PUBLIC STILL FEARFUL IN AIR, AERONAUTICS' OFFICIAL FINDS

By Charles P. Stewart

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Way back in the days when folks were laughing over the first edition of Joe Miller's Joke Book this story was a mouldy old chestnut:

WM. MacCRACKEN

"An aged darky was explaining why, though undaunted by the perils of railroad travel, he drew the line on water transportation.

"It had been pointed out to him that it hurt no worse to be drowned at sea than to be ground up ashore, and that the number of fatalities by the alternative mehtods didn't differ widely, if any.

"The venerable Ethiopian couldn't see it.

"'Kuh-smash goes yo' train,' he said, 'an' thah yo' is. Down goes yo' boat, an' what is you'?'"

AN ancient chestnut!

Yet, according to the reasoning of William P. MacCracken, Jr., assistant secretary of commerce in charge of aeronautics, that old darky's frame of mind parallels the frame of mind of people who never turn a hair at the idea of careening over the landscape in a recklessly-run automobile, but blench at the thought of going up in a nice, safe plane, with a careful pilot in charge.

The darky didn't want to be mangled in a railroad wreck, but if it happened he could stand it. A land-lubber, drowning seemed to him like a strange, terrible kind of death, which he shuddered at.

An autoist's attuned to the dangers of the streets and highways. They don't perturb him. Aviation dangers are new to his mental processes. They give him the shivers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF COMMERCE MacCRACKEN can't remember a time when automobiles weren't pretty numerous, but occasionally he meets some elderly individual who's still more or less leery of them.

He calculates that there must have been a stage of the game when they were quite generally regardd a safest to keep out of.

Just so with airplanes?

MacCracken reckons. He's aware that many persons are still afraid of aviation, though a goodly number who were afraid of it originally have outgrown their earlier nervousness now.

The aeronautics secretary believes the coming generation will regard flying as indifferently as the present one regards the auto.

MacCRACKEN had a chance to try out this theory recently, at an aviation show given by the commerce department in Washington.

Free rides were an important feature of the occasion.

The department's trying to popularize flying, and the officials' view was that folk who took sufficient interest in it, and had the nerve to go aloft, ought to be encouraged. So they weren't stingy about it.

But what attracted their attention was that the clamorous ones were nearly all very young—mere children.

THE oldsters hung back. With a few exceptions, they weren't at all willing to leave terra firma even in response to cordial invitations. When they did accept they gritted their teeth, and gave every indication of feeling that they were committing themselves to a desperate venture.

Little boys and girls climbed aboard and soared into the heavens as indifferently as the average citizen takes a street car.

"A new psychology" is Secretary MacCracken's diagnosis.

MacCRACKEN does, indeed, expect to see aviation develop and expand with the mechanical improvement of planes and the extension of flying facilities.

He expects still more, however, from an air-minded generation, now in its infancy.

Tours Ireland on Hands.

Claiming to be a Canadian and an ex-soldier, a man recently passed through Dundalk, Ireland, walking on his hands. He had come from Dublin and said he intended to proceed to Belfast on his digit-and-finger hike. His hands were encased in sandels, and he had with him a goat harnessed to a little four-wheeled cart, which contained a camping outfit and cooking utensils. He aroused so much interest in Dundalk that the Civic Guards had to be called out to regulate the traffic for more than two miles along the Newry Road.

Representatives of all golf clubs in the Musselburgh district of Scotland attended the funeral at Mihill recently of Robert Turnbull, golf professional of Nice and formerly of the Royal Copenhagen Golf club.

WASHINGTON STEWART'S LETTER.

PUBLIC STILL FEARFUL IN AIR, AERONAUTICS' OFFICIAL FINDS

By Charles P. Stewart

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Way back in the days when folks were laughing over the first edition of Joe Miller's Joke Book this story was a mouldy old chestnut:

"An aged darky was explaining why, though undaunted by the perils of railroad travel, he drew the line on water transportation.

STRAND OFFERS MODERN STORY

May McAvoy Heads Cast of "Matinee Ladies."

Romance—in the hearts of a Broadway gigolo and a cabaret cigarette girl. That is the subject matter of Warner Bros.' production of "Matinee Ladies," starring May McAvoy which comes to the Strand theatre on Monday.

Back of this romance is a picture of rich and fashionable wives who have lost interest in their fat and bald husbands and who yearn for amorous adventures with younger men during the long afternoons. This demand has been satisfied in New York where these matinee ladies are probably to be found in greatest abundance at the afternoon cabarets where impecunious young men who dance divinely are easy to meet.

Bob, played by Malcolm MacGregor, is one of thes easy-to-meet young men. The money he earns as a dancing man saves his college career when it seems that nothing can. Thus he meets the cabaret cigarette girl (May McAvoy). They fall in love, but each suspects the other. Can she love a dancing man? Is a cigarette girl in such a place worth his love? These were the questions which they ask themselves, but in the sweep of events such questions are soon overwhelmed by more vital consideration. Hedda Hopper, Richard Tucker, Margaret Seddon, Cissy Fitzgerald, and Jean Lefferty are seen in the supporting cast. Byron Haskins directed.

Heavy Track Expected To Increase Whitney Entry's Chances

Bostonian Is Latest Choice As Nags Face Barrier For Classic

Preferred by General Sentiment Although Rip Rap, Osmand, Rolled Stocking, Scapa Flow and Others, Mostly Mudders, are Also Given Play.

By Davis J. Walsh.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 14.—The top sergeant stands with watch in hand, noting the minutes, the seconds, and ever and anon he glances along the line to see that all is well. The starter watches the field with the eye of a basilisk and notes everything, not exclusive of the fact that Saxon is acting up, as usual; that Rip Rap won't face the barrier, that horses in general are a contrary contraption.

And ever and anon, as he glances along the line, he sees the horse that wants to go and the horse that would rather not have been there in the first place, and somehow must get them off. It is the zero hour and the start of the Kentucky Derby of a mile and a quarter.

That's it. The xero hour. And it will come this afternoon along about five o'clock when some eighteen of the ranking thoroughbreds the country over will dapple their way to the post in the fifty-third running of the Derby. This, as aid, is the fifty-third running, but derbies are derbies and the 1927 model is a felt hat.

For once, there is no outstanding candidate. One man likes Rip Rap, another cares dearly for Osmand, a third wants to sell you on Rolled Stocking. But the final test is the composite ballot and that shows that the general sentiment is for the Whitney entry.

The writer's opinion, which may be important in case that mucilage is palatable, is that Bostonian, winner of the Preakness, will repeat here, equalling the record of Sir Barton, the only horse to win both classics. For one reason, the track today figures to be heavier than the average conscience; for another, Bostonian can and will run a distance.

So much for experting, which as usual will pay off exactly ten cents on the dollar, provided you have the dollar. The expert never starts unless you have the dollar.

Somewhere in the neighborhood of 75,000 holding a dollar to the individual fist, will mill around in the confines of Churchill Downs for the privilege of saying: "I was there." This is very important, particularly in the billiard rooms at Fort Wayne, Ind., during the summer season.

Some of them will be there by heel and toeing their way to Churchill Downs, five miles distant; others will pay the large sum of seven cents by trolley; a third group will ride the springs of a delivery wagon and a fourth the cushions of high powered motor cars.

For this is the derby of derbies and the riff raff and the last of the Stuyvesants will be there. Rubbing elbows, borrowing matches and exchanging dirty looks. The Stuyvesants still can look very dirty with or without shave and a hair cut.

Post positions, of course, don't pay a nickel at the judges' stand or otherwise the boys who are paying $20 a night for hotel room and nothing a night for a park bench will have wasted their exceedingly important time. Still, the horse that breaks in front often wins the race.

Therefore, it may be noted with due appreciation that Rolled Stocking, liked by a lot of men who haven't looked further north than an ankle in years is No. 4. He is bounded by Buddy Bauer, who either starts fast or not at all, and Saxon, a horse who rushes to the front and then thinks better of it.

Hydromel, the chills and fever entry, is No. 7, followed by Black Panther and Whiskery. The former is a slow starter, the latter a fast horse off the mark, so that Hydromel and Whiskery should get away without interference.

Rip Rap and Bostonian are coupled at No. 13, and 14, insuring a fair start since Osmand is a fast breaker and Mr. Kirkwood only is in there for the exercise.

There isn't anything out there toward the far edge of the track except Fred Jr., and Scapa Flow, many betting rather critical money on his chances. Scapa, a fast breaker, is likely to cut off the rest at the pole and make the early pace but this event is not an early event. The finish, in fact, will be in front of the distant grandstand, a mile and a quarter away.

Further than that, it figures to be an event for mudders. Among the latter are Osmand, Bostonian, first and last but not in the race, Black Panther, Scapa Flow and Fred Jr.

FOUR IN ROW FOR NEWELL

Dailey's Nine Shuts Out Wellsville Club 2 to 0.

Wolf's wildness plus errors behind him caused the Nash Motors of Wellsville to lose out to Laughlin on Newell field last evening though they outhit the potters by more than three to one. Indeed, the victors made but two safe drives, while the losers garnered seven. Yet the former lost, 2 to 0.

Scoring occurred in but one inning, the third. Then miscues behind Wolf gave the West Virginians two runs and the game. Both sides previously and thereafter administered each other goose eggs regularly.

Ashe was given fine support by Laughlin. He himself fielded superbly. He accepted nine chances.

Rager and C. Coleman excelled in fielding. The former accepted four hard chances in left. He also hit safely in two of three efforts. The latter had a single and a triple while gathering in six of seven offerings in his territory.

THREE LOOP NINES STILL UNBEATEN

Heimies, Bulger Drugs and Laughlin, N., Win Two Apiece.

Heimies, Bulger Drugs and Laughlin, Newell, are undefeated as the first week of the Review-Tribune Recreation league comes to a close, each club boasting two victories and no defeats.

The Bulger Drugs last night won from the Review-Tribune in a fast game at Klondyke, the final count being 7 to 3.

The Drugs had one big inning, the seventh, in which they sent five runners across the plate to clinch the contest. With one run in and two men on the bases in the last half of the ninth, the Printers started a rally which, however, was nipped before the Drugs' lead could be overhauled.

The Printers scored first, crossing the pan in the opening frame, and added another tally in the third. The Drugs went scoreless until the fifth when they tied it up. In the seventh they bunched hits with a couple of defense errors to score the winning counters.

Johnny Green turned in a three base smack as one of the offensive features of the performance while Shortstop Alex Kidd's one-handed spear of a sizzling liner which he converted into a double put out marked the defensive play.

Ted Scheffer's Y. M. C. A. nine won their first league game when they pinned a 5 to 4 defeat on the Workingmen's Store club at Upper Columbian park. The Workingmen outhit the "Y," but ragged fielding handicapped their efforts. Catches by H. McKernan of the "Y" and Harris of the losers were the game's features.

The Roselawns had things their own way almost in their clash with the Johannes Drugs on the Northside, winning decisively by a count of 15 to 1.

TURK NASH WINS FROM BILLIARDS

Winners Bunch Hits in Third to Clinch Contest.

Outhitting their opponents and making timely changes on the hilltop when the bases became clogged by reason of infield miscues Turk-Nash won from the American Billiards in a fast City Industrial league contest at Columbian park last evening, 7 to 3.

The contest had been transferred from Klondyke to Columbian park.

Both clubs scored in the first inning, a trio of errors contributing to Turk-Nash's tally in that period, while a walk, double and sacrifice fly enabled the Americans to get theirs.

The winners forged to the front in the third when Southpaw Baker was set upon for three runs and four hits. Then "Cracker" Howell succeeded him, unleashing his side-arm delivery and whipping over some wide curves. Before he could warm up to the situation two more runs resulted. In the succeeding three innings he allowed but one run. He retired his former comrades in a row, but six men facing him, in the final two batting chances of the automobile aggregation.

Springer, a likely looking youngster, started the flinging for Turk-Nash and did well until two men were down in the fourth. Three errors in that period plus a double made necessary his retirement to save the contest.

The game was featured by J. Watson's two doubles in succession, his last driving in two runs. He swatted .667 for the day. McConnell led his club in swatting with a double and two singles in four attempts, a .750 mark.

Deshler showed he could play first base as he understudied the versatile Bill Mundy.

Moore's playing at short stood out throughout the game. He accepted five chances without the suggestion of a slip-up. He hit hard twice though he failed to get the balls into safe territory.

CARDS CUT GIANT LEAD

Willie Sherdel Unsolvable and Red Birds Win 11 to 1.

By Les Conklin.

NEW YORK, May 14.—After going hitless in his last 36 times at bat, Al Tyson of the New York Giants has bolstered his dwindling batting average by collecting four consecutive singles in the final game of the Giant-Cardinal series. Tyson saved his job but failed to help the Giants, who were massacred by a score of 11 to 1 and now lead the Red Birds by only one game.

The Giants couldn't touch Wee Willie Sherdel and went to pieces in the field like a third-hand automobile, making five bobbles. Aroused by the sting of two defeats, the Cards knocked Fitzsimmons silly and scored seven runs in the first inning. Don Songer, obtained from Pittsburgh, made his debut in a New York uniform and twirled five scoreless innings.

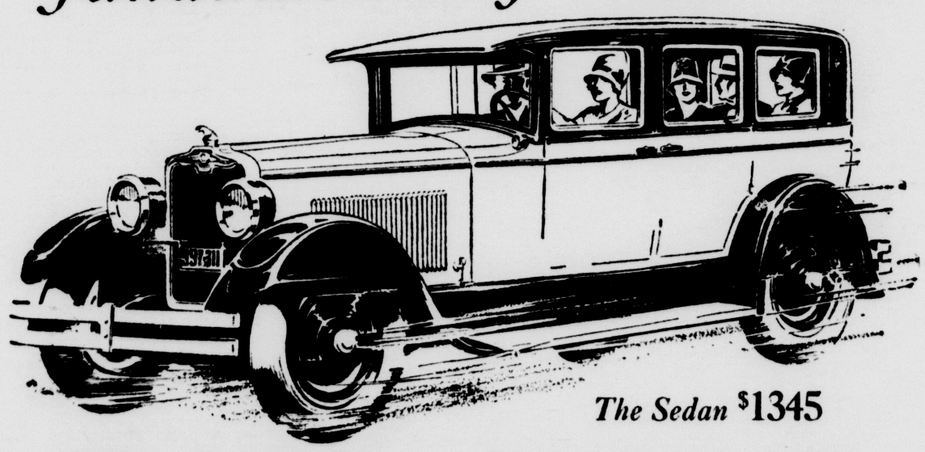
Trailing Cincinnati by four runs, the Brooklyn Dodgers staged a rousing five run rally in the eighth and won, 5 to 4. The Dodgers have won nine of their last twelve contests while the Reds have lost more games than the Boston Red Sox. As far as their pennant chances are concerned, the Porkville boys might just as well engage passage on that rocket which is to be sent to the moon from Worcester, Mass. in the near future.

Hoyt shaded Wingard in a pitchers' battle as the Yankees downed the Brown for the fourth straight time, 3 to 1. The Yanks increased their lead as the White Sox were idle.

Lundgren, Red Sox rookie, may prove to be the Moses needed to lead the back bay boys out of the wilderness. After beating Detroit last week in his first start, he whitewashed Cleveland 11 to 0, yesterday, holding the Indians to three hits and five fouls.

Another three hit performance was turned in by Hub Pruett as the Phillies trimmed the Cubs, 4 to 1, and tied the Pirates for third place. The game was a home run orgy. Old Cy Williams contributed his sixth homer of the season, Jimmy Wilson also hit for the circuit and Fred Leach . . e up the game with a homer in the eighth inning. A homer by Kaufmann of the Cubs stretched Chicago's home run record to eleven consecutive games.

Thousands acclaim this "Fundamentally better" Six



The Sedan $1345

THIS new Six-60 answers—unmistakably—the insistent demand for a low-priced car that is strictly quality through and through.

Just think of a car selling as low as $1295, with the quiet power, the freedom from vibration that only a 7-bearing crankshaft can give.

Think of it with the added smoothness of new type Nelson Bohnalite Pistons—the advantage of interchangeable Ring True Bearings—the ease of steering made possible by Ross cam and lever steering—the longer life and dependability of Timken bearings.

Add to these marked advantages, Lockheed Hydraulic 4-wheel brakes—wide, deep-cushioned, pillowy seats—long-lasting lacquer finish and a full score of other advanced features.

Then you'll realize what a marvel of satisfaction and mechanical efficiency this low-priced Six-60 really is.

But you must see it, too. For it's built low to the ground—with the graceful, flowing lines that denote quality and give that air of individuality we all appreciate so much.

So, see this "fundamentally better" Six and drive it. You'll find it everything you've always thought a Peerless must be.

Heavy Track Expected To Increase Whitney Entry's Chances

Bostonian Is Latest Choice As Nags Face Barrier For Classic

Preferred by General Sentiment Although Rip Rap, Osmand, Rolled Stocking, Scapa Flow and Others, Mostly Mudders, are Also Given Play.

By Davis J. Walsh.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 14.—The top sergeant stands with watch in hand, noting the minutes, the seconds, and ever and anon he glances along the line to see that all is well. The starter watches the field with the eye of a basilisk and notes everything, not exclusive of the fact that Saxon is acting up, as usual; that Rip Rap won't face the barrier, that horses in general are a contrary contraption.

And ever and anon, as he glances along the line, he sees the horse that wants to go and the horse that would rather not have been there in the first place, and somehow must get them off. It is the zero hour and the start of the Kentucky Derby of a mile and a quarter.

That's it. The xero hour. And it will come this afternoon along about five o'clock when some eighteen of the ranking thoroughbreds the country over will dapple their way to the post in the fifty-third running of the Derby. This, as aid, is the fifty-third running, but derbies are derbies and the 1927 model is a felt hat.

For once, there is no outstanding candidate. One man likes Rip Rap, another cares dearly for Osmand, a third wants to sell you on Rolled Stocking. But the final test is the composite ballot and that shows that the general sentiment is for the Whitney entry.

The writer's opinion, which may be important in case that mucilage is palatable, is that Bostonian, winner of the Preakness, will repeat here, equalling the record of Sir Barton, the only horse to win both classics. For one reason, the track today figures to be heavier than the average conscience; for another, Bostonian can and will run a distance.

So much for experting, which as usual will pay off exactly ten cents on the dollar, provided you have the dollar. The expert never starts unless you have the dollar.

Somewhere in the neighborhood of 75,000 holding a dollar to the individual fist, will mill around in the confines of Churchill Downs for the privilege of saying: "I was there." This is very important, particularly in the billiard rooms at Fort Wayne, Ind., during the summer season.

Some of them will be there by heel and toeing their way to Churchill Downs, five miles distant; others will pay the large sum of seven cents by trolley; a third group will ride the springs of a delivery wagon and a fourth the cushions of high powered motor cars.

For this is the derby of derbies and the riff raff and the last of the Stuyvesants will be there. Rubbing elbows, borrowing matches and exchanging dirty looks. The Stuyvesants still can look very dirty with or without shave and a hair cut.

Post positions, of course, don't pay a nickel at the judges' stand or otherwise the boys who are paying $20 a night for hotel room and nothing a night for a park bench will have wasted their exceedingly important time. Still, the horse that breaks in front often wins the race.

Therefore, it may be noted with due appreciation that Rolled Stocking, liked by a lot of men who haven't looked further north than an ankle in years is No. 4. He is bounded by Buddy Bauer, who either starts fast or not at all, and Saxon, a horse who rushes to the front and then thinks better of it.

Hydromel, the chills and fever entry, is No. 7, followed by Black Panther and Whiskery. The former is a slow starter, the latter a fast horse off the mark, so that Hydromel and Whiskery should get away without interference.

Rip Rap and Bostonian are coupled at No. 13, and 14, insuring a fair start since Osmand is a fast breaker and Mr. Kirkwood only is in there for the exercise.

There isn't anything out there toward the far edge of the track except Fred Jr., and Scapa Flow, many betting rather critical money on his chances. Scapa, a fast breaker, is likely to cut off the rest at the pole and make the early pace but this event is not an early event. The finish, in fact, will be in front of the distant grandstand, a mile and a quarter away.

Further than that, it figures to be an event for mudders. Among the latter are Osmand, Bostonian, first and last but not in the race, Black Panther, Scapa Flow and Fred Jr.

100 TO COMPETE IN GYMNASTIC MEET

NEW YORK, May 14.—More than 100 of America's leading gymnasts will compete in the national A. A. U. gymnastic championships here tonight. The U. S. naval academy, the U. S. navy and colleges from every section of the country are represented.

THREE LOOP NINES STILL UNBEATEN

Heimies, Bulger Drugs and Laughlin, N., Win Two Apiece.

Heimies, Bulger Drugs and Laughlin, Newell, are undefeated as the first week of the Review-Tribune Recreation league comes to a close, each club boasting two victories and no defeats.

The Bulger Drugs last night won from the Review-Tribune in a fast game at Klondyke, the final count being 7 to 3.

The Drugs had one big inning, the seventh, in which they sent five runners across the plate to clinch the contest. With one run in and two men on the bases in the last half of the ninth, the Printers started a rally which, however, was nipped before the Drugs' lead could be overhauled.

The Printers scored first, crossing the pan in the opening frame, and added another tally in the third. The Drugs went scoreless until the fifth when they tied it up. In the seventh they bunched hits with a couple of defense errors to score the winning counters.

Johnny Green turned in a three base smack as one of the offensive features of the performance while Shortstop Alex Kidd's one-handed spear of a sizzling liner which he converted into a double put out marked the defensive play.

Ted Scheffer's Y. M. C. A. nine won their first league game when they pinned a 5 to 4 defeat on the Workingmen's Store club at Upper Columbian park. The Workingmen outhit the "Y," but ragged fielding handicapped their efforts. Catches by H. McKernan of the "Y" and Harris of the losers were the game's features.

The Roselawns had things their own way almost in their clash with the Johannes Drugs on the Northside, winning decisively by a count of 15 to 1.

The Roselawns turned in their runs early, scoring the entire 15 before the sixth. After that they were stopped. Errors on the part of the Drugs aided the Roselawn club.

TURK NASH WINS FROM BILLIARDS

Winners Bunch Hits in Third to Clinch Contest.

Outhitting their opponents and making timely changes on the hilltop when the bases became clogged by reason of infield miscues Turk-Nash won from the American Billiards in a fast City Industrial league contest at Columbian park last evening, 7 to 3.

The contest had been transferred from Klondyke to Columbian park.

Both clubs scored in the first inning, a trio of errors contributing to Turk-Nash's tally in that period, while a walk, double and sacrifice fly enabled the Americans to get theirs.

The winners forged to the front in the third when Southpaw Baker was set upon for three runs and four hits. Then "Cracker" Howell succeeded him, unleashing his side-arm delivery and whipping over some wide curves. Before he could warm up to the situation two more runs resulted. In the succeeding three innings he allowed but one run. He retired his former comrades in a row, but six men facing him, in the final two batting chances of the automobile aggregation.

Springer, a likely looking youngster, started the flinging for Turk-Nash and did well until two men were down in the fourth. Three errors in that period plus a double made necessary his retirement to save the contest.

The game was featured by J. Watson's two doubles in succession, his last driving in two runs. He swatted .667 for the day. McConnell led his club in swatting with a double and two singles in four attempts, a .750 mark.

Deshler showed he could play first base as he understudied the versatile Bill Mundy.

Moore's playing at short stood out throughout the game. He accepted five chances without the suggestion of a slip-up. He hit hard twice though he failed to get the balls into safe territory.

CARDS CUT GIANT LEAD

Willie Sherdel Unsolvable and Red Birds Win 11 to 1.

By Les Conklin.

NEW YORK, May 14.—After going hitless in his last 36 times at bat, Al Tyson of the New York Giants has bolstered his dwindling batting average by collecting four consecutive singles in the final game of the Giant-Cardinal series. Tyson saved his job but failed to help the Giants, who were massacred by a score of 11 to 1 and now lead the Red Birds by only one game.

The Giants couldn't touch Wee Willie Sherdel and went to pieces in the field like a third-hand automobile, making five bobbles. Aroused by the sting of two defeats, the Cards knocked Fitzsimmons silly and scored seven runs in the first inning. Don Songer, obtained from Pittsburgh, made his debut in a New York uniform and twirled five scoreless innings.

Trailing Cincinnati by four runs, the Brooklyn Dodgers staged a rousing five run rally in the eighth and won, 5 to 4. The Dodgers have won nine of their last twelve contests while the Reds have lost more games than the Boston Red Sox. As far as their pennant chances are concerned, the Porkville boys might just as well engage passage on that rocket which is to be sent to the moon from Worcester, Mass. in the near future.

Hoyt shaded Wingard in a pitchers' battle as the Yankees downed the Brown for the fourth straight time, 3 to 1. The Yanks increased their lead as the White Sox were idle.

Lundgren, Red Sox rookie, may prove to be the Moses needed to lead the back bay boys out of the wilderness. After beating Detroit last week in his first start, he whitewashed Cleveland 11 to 0, yesterday, holding the Indians to three hits and five fouls.

Another three hit performance was turned in by Hub Pruett as the Phillies trimmed the Cubs, 4 to 1, and tied the Pirates for third place. The game was a home run orgy. Old Cy Williams contributed his sixth homer of the season, Jimmy Wilson also hit for the circuit and Fred Leach [illegible] up the game with a homer in the eighth inning. A homer by Kaufmann of the Cubs stretched Chicago's home run record to eleven consecutive games.

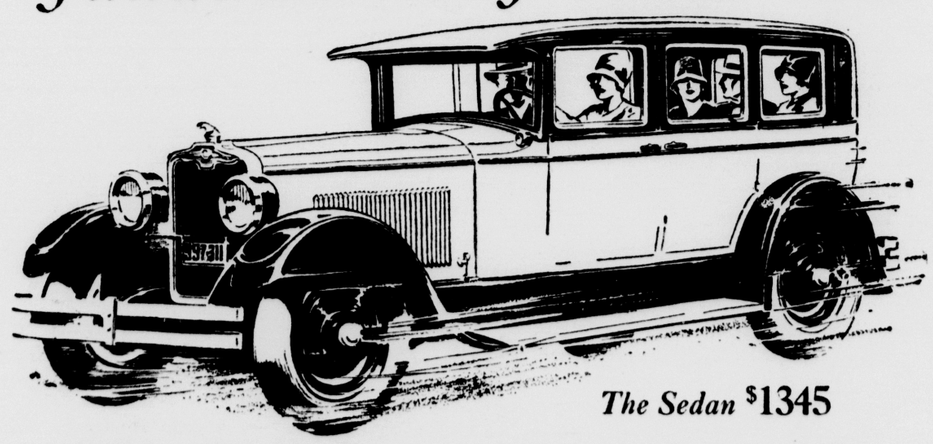
Thousands acclaim this "Fundamentally better" Six



The Sedan $1345

THIS new Six-60 answers—unmistakably—the insistent demand for a low-priced car that is strictly quality through and through.

Just think of a car selling as low as $1295, with the quiet power, the freedom from vibration that only a 7-bearing crankshaft can give.

Think of it with the added smoothness of new type Nelson Bohnalite Pistons—the advantage of interchangeable Ring True Bearings—the ease of steering made possible by Ross cam and lever steering—the longer life and dependability of Timken bearings.

Add to these marked advantages, Lockheed Hydraulic 4-wheel brakes—wide, deep-cushioned, pillowy seats—long-lasting lacquer finish and a full score of other advanced features.

Then you'll realize what a marvel of satisfaction and mechanical efficiency this low-priced Six-60 really is.

But you must see it, too. For it's built low to the ground—with the graceful, flowing lines that denote quality and give that air of individuality we all appreciate so much.

So, see this "fundamentally better" Six and drive it. You'll find it everything you've always thought a Peerless must be.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

[The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune.]

RUSSIA is a country bigger than ours, and probably, at least as rich in resources. But wealth means nothing, unless you have men that know how to get it out, use it and multiply it. Remember that, if inclined to criticize the very rich.

The man who can say, "dig there, and you will find gold—or coal," is at least as important as the man that digs.

Russia's national income for six months is $850,000,000. That would not be a financial flea bite, in this favored land. We have the stuff in the ground, and the mines, and the men, machinery and brains that know how to get it out.

Russia will have that also, and when she gets rich, she will become conservative—that is how human nature works, from Nijni-Novgorod to Broad and Wall streets.

Our shivering financiers that nag and hinder Russia are doing exactly what they don't want to do, keeping Russia radical. Help the Russians to make a few billion roubles more each year, and you will see Soviet red change to delicate pink, then fade to a dull gold.

That Governor Martin has rendered great service to Florida in financing $10,000,000 of everglades drainage is shown by S. Davies Warfield, president of the Seaboard Railway, who assisted in negotiating the financing with Dillion, Read, Eldredge and Company.

This drainage will dispose of surplus waters from Lake Okechobee, and open to agricultural development 4,000,000 acres of the most wonderfully fertile land on earth, lying along the southeastern crest of Florida, and the Saint Lucie Canal, as far east as Stuart.

In Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, on a Sunday morning, long ago, Henry Ward Beecher presented a young negro slave girl to his congregation, and proceeded to sell her at public auction, asking for gifts totalling $900, the sum necessary to buy the girl's freedom.

Beecher imitated the manner and speech of a slave auctioneer and more than $900 was raised. Rose Terry, a writer, put a valuable ring in the plate, and Beecher, putting it on the girl's finger, said "with this ring I thee wed—to freedom."

Beecher is dead, but the good work that he did lives on. And next Sunday morning, when Plymouth Church celebrates its eightieth anniversary, the former slave girl, sold at public auction in that church, will be present, a happy old grandmother, married to

Condemned Slayer of Husband Has Not Embraced Religion.

GRAY CONTRITE

Sashweight Murderers are Ready for Trip "Up River."

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., May 14.—Ruth Brown Snyder, who on Monday will be taken in shackles to the death house in Sing Sing has developed "a profound sense of penitence," the Rev. Patrick Murphy, Roman Catholic chaplain, said today after visiting her.

She has not, however, embraced religion as strongly as has her one-time sweetheart, Henry Judd Gray, who also makes the trip "up the river" on Monday. In fact, she confided to one inmate in the Queens county jail that she fears no church nor God can ever forgive her for her sins.

Gray spends much of his time in his cell on his knees. He assures all those who talk to him that he has "made his peace with God."

He will go to Sing Sing absolutely penniless, having signed over everything to his wife. He issued a statement from his cell warning young men to beware of rum and women, saying: "I am one of the best examples of what whisky, lust and sin will ultimately lead one into."

Woman Will Appeal Case.

The condemned woman still clings to the hope expressed by her counsel that she can "beat the sentence and the electric chair." The appeal of her case is expected to be based principally on the court's refusal to grant her a separate trial. Lawyers said that Justice Townsend Scudder's refusal to grant separate trials in the case of Mrs. Snyder and Gray was the first time a court had availed itself of that part of the Baumes laws giving a judge discretionary powers.

COUNTY FIELD MEET POSTPONED

Because of rain and a muddy track, the county high school field meet at Lisbon today was postponed until 2 p. m. Tuesday.

Washington Announces That Proposal to Send Dirigible to Labrador is Not Feasible.

STORMS DELAY YANKEE AIRMEN

Three Planes are Groomed for Hop-off in Nonstop Race to Span Atlantic Ocean.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The government virtually abandoned today the search for the Nungesser-Coli trans-Atlantic flyers.

Dense fog over the upper Atlantic convinced naval officers that further search of the water was futile, and navy ships accordingly were ordered back. Similar action is expected by the coast guard.

Shortage of Helium.

At the same time it was announced at the navy department that the proposal to send the dirigible Los Angeles to the bleak Labrador coast is not feasible, and has been abandoned. The principal difficulty was said to be a shortage of helium. The Labrador trip would entail about 2,400 miles.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 14.—A report was received here today from a lumber camp in the woods of Mount Uniacke district, north of this city, that the sound of a powerful engine was heard over the camp about 10:40 o'clock Monday night.

Parties searching for traces of the French aviators, Nungesser and Coli, who have been missing since their attempted Paris-to-New York flight, took cognizance of the report. Several other similar reports have been received from outlying districts in this section of the country.

According to the lumbermen the noise of the engine ended abruptly as though it had "gone dead." When word of the missing fliers reached the lumber camp the men reported the incident, believing that the noise they heard was that of an airplane and might have been the missing "White Bird."

MINEOLA, N. Y., May 14.—Storms and fog over the North Atlantic today held up the American airmen who will attempt the 2,600 mile non-stop flight from New York to Paris. Indications were that the bad weather may last for at least 48 hours.

Clarence D. Chamberlin, Lloyd Bertaud and Commander Richard E. Byrd are awaiting patiently, but not so Capt. Charles Lindbergh, the restless young sky pilot, who dropped in from San Diego, Calif., to compete in the big trans-Atlantic hop. Lindbergh is anxious to get away. He flew across one continent to make the New York-Paris jump and he is chafing under the delay imposed by adverse weather. He is chagrined that a little thing like a storm and fog should interfere with a flight over the ocean.

The three planes of the flyers — "Columbia," "American" and "Spirit of St. Louis"—are all groomed for the flight, but the "America" will require some more testing before Commander Byrd will be statisfied to undertake the big hop.

Lindbergh's Mother on Way.

Lindbergh, most picturesque of the waiting airmen, has spent a good portion of his time since his arrival at Curtiss flying field overhauling his trim, silver-colored monoplane. It is

L. M. THOMAS, 73, DIES SUDDENLY ON SOJOURN IN MT. DORA, FLA.

President of R. Thomas and Sons' Porcelain Company.

PIONEER HERE

Death Occurs as he Prepares to Return Home.

Lawrence M. Thomas, 73, president of the R. Thomas & Sons' company, electric porcelain manufacturers, and one of East Liverpool's pioneer ceramic manufacturers, died suddenly in his summer home in Mt. Dora, Florida, at 10 o'clock this morning of heart disease.

Mr. Thomas, who had been in Florida since November 1, 1926, succumbed as he was about to return to East Liverpool. His wife and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Barnhart, the latter a niece of Mrs. Thomas, were in Florida when his death occurred.

He was born in East Liverpool March 30, 1854, a son of Richard Thomas, who founded the R. Thomas Sons' company in 1873. The plant originally engaged in the manufacture of door knobs, having but one kiln. The company, incorporated in 1892 with the late George W. Thomas as president, L. M. Thomas, vice president and treasurer, and A. W. Thomas, secretary, operates plants here and in Lisbon.

Lawrence M. Thomas became head of the company upon the death of his brother, George R. Thomas, on August 7, 1921. He was succeeded as vice-president by his nephew, G. Richard Thomas.

Mr. Thomas, who resided at 227 Seventh street, had spent his winters in Florida for the last 28 years. He was active in the management of the business of the company until he went to the south last fall.

Member of Methodist Church.

Besides his widow, he is survived by two brothers, Charles R. and Atwood W. Thomas, of East Liverpool, and three sisters, Mrs. A. G. Mason, Lisbon; Mrs. George B. Harvey, Providence Forge, Va., and Mrs. C. E. Bradshaw, Youngstown.

He was a member and trustee of the First Methodist Episcopal church.

The body was to leave Florida today and will arrive in East Liverpool, Tuesday morning.

Automobile Thief Routed by Woman; Man is Attacked

An automobile tire thief who attempt to remove the spare tire from the machine of Mrs. Lena Urie, 638 Avondale street, was routed by the woman at 1:30 o'clock this morning, according to a report made to police.

Mrs. Urie, reading in the house, heard a noise on the street where her car was parked. She stepped from the house and a man who was in the act of removing the tire from the machine, fled. Mrs. Urie said that she was attempting to adjust the tire on the back of the machine when the stranger returned. She struck at him, and the thief in an effort to get away dropped a pair of wire cutters which he had in his hand and his cap which were later turned over to the police.

An unidentified man, said to be a carpenter and who refused to divulge his name, had a similar experience with a tire thief about midnight. He said he was attracted by a man who was removing the tire from a machine parked on one of the hillside streets. He attacked him but the thief struck him over the head and fled, leaving a pair of wire cutters.

Soviet Government Drafts Protest On Raids In England

Note, Threatening Economic Reprisals, Probably Will be Delivered in London Tonight.

PLAN TO CANCEL PLACED ORDERS

Mounted Police Turn Back Mobs Attempting to Storm British Mission in Moscow.

MOSCOW, May 14. — The Soviet government is drafting a note of protest to England against the raids of the Soviet trade delegation headquarters, threatening economic reprisals, it was announced by the foreign office today.

The note probably will be delivered late this evening. It is understood that the Soviet proposes to cancel large industrial orders placed in England.

Mounted police were stationed in front of the British mission this afternoon and turned back mobs who were attemping to stage anti-English demonstrations.

The crowds assembled before the foreign office and gave vent to their wrath.

Break in Trade Relations Looms.

MOSCOW, May 14.—England will suffer more than Russia from the break in trade relations which is predicted as the result of the police raid on Soviet house in London, the official newspaper Izvestia stated today.

Izvestia states that the British government has begun a drive which will end in the breaking of relations with the Soviet union, as threatened by the last Chamberlain note to Russia. The newspaper predicts that the raids will be followed by the publication of "counterfeit documents."

"England will suffer more than Russia," said Izvestia, "since many competitors will share the Soviet market now held by England. The policy of forcing a break in relations, which the British government apparently has inaugurated, carries a threat of unheard of complications to European economic conditions and will be a public calamity. It comes at a moment when strained trade conditions between England and the Soviet union are lessening and Russia has entered the economic conference to discuss ways and means to enter world trade."

Police Search "Strong Room".

LONDON May 14.—A nine foot wall of steel and concrete guarding the Soviets' trade and diplomatic secrets in raided Soviet House yielded today to pneumatic drills, acetylene torches, picks, shovels and crow bars.

The police forced themselves into the "strong room" in continuation of

MAN CONVICTED IN SLAYING OF ANANIA GETS LIFE SENTENCE

Fight for New Trial May go to Supreme Court.

OFF TO PRISON

Defense Guns are Turned on Marie Chorgas.

Salvatore Rini, 22, of East Liverpool, who entered the state penitentiary at Columbus today to begin serving a life sentence for second degree murder in the death of Pasquale (Patsy) Anania, 25, of Wellsville, will carry his fight for a new trial to the supreme court, if necessary, Attorney Raymond Knepper, of Wellsville, declared last night.

Goes to Appellate Court.

Steps are expected to be taken at once to ask the appellate court to reverse the action yesterday afternoon of Judge W. F. Lones, who, after hearing arguments in common pleas court, Lisbon, overruled the defense motion to set aside the jury's verdict in the first trial.

After denying another trial, Judge Lones sentenced Rini to life imprisonment for the death of Anania, whose body, with a knife wound in the heart, was found in his (Rini's) apartment in Walnut street on last March 22.

When asked if he had anything to say as to why sentence should not be passed, Rini, sitting beside his father, Philip Rini of Wellsville, stood up and declared:

"I am innocent, Your Honor."

Attorneys Clash.

Rini was taken to prison early today, 53 days after the body of Anania was found, by Sheriff George Wright of Lisbon. His father and mother, the latter very nervous and weeping and sister said goodbye to their son and brother in the jury room in the courthouse after sentence was pronounced yesterday afternoon.

Attorney W. A. O'Grady, of Wellsville, and Prosecutor Robert M. Brookes clashed during the arguments on the defense motion for a new trial, when O'Grady charged that evidence had been suppressed in the case. O'Grady cited the fact that although money had been telegraphed to her, Rini's wife failed to appear to testify.

O'Grady also turned his guns on Mrs. Marie Chorgas, 28, of Minneapolis, Rini's sister-in law and co-defendant, who was acquitted by the jury upon the recommendation of the state. Mrs. Chorgas, waiving her exemption as a co-defendant, testified for the prosecution, declaring Anania, in a dying whisper, said: "Sal did it."

Both O'Grady and Knepper argued

BY LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

BATON ROUGE, La., May 14.—Through at last with the feeble resistance of man-made levees, the flood waters of the Mississippi spread leisurely today over a home stretch to the Gulf of Mexico. Over the whole countryside in south central Louisiana the river has had its way, from Cairo to Cottonport.

From Cottonport to the gulf is a matter of ten days' disaster, in half a dozen rich and fertile parishes comprising a tillable area of 4,200,000 acres. Within the region resides 258,917 persons.

There are more refugees today—almost 4,000 at Marksville alone, 1,500 at Bunkie, thousands more scattered along the high ground west of the new swath marked for inundation by the crumbling of the Bayou Des Glaises levees.

More Homes Abandoned.

More homes have been abandoned, more livestock parked hopefully upon mushy levees as once again the cycle of the cravasse works itself out in a new country.

State relief headquarters here are organized to care for 100,000 more flood exiles within a fortnight. They hope but do not yet venture the unqualified assertion that this will be the end.

Another Parish Threatened.

Torrential rains in the lower valley during the last two days have forced engineers and meterologists to revise their estimates of maximum high waters between Baton Rouge and New Orleans, and three danger points along the levees south of the Old river, the last tributary, hold the dike patrols and revetment builders to their wearying labors. If the danger points hold, the greatest flood of United States history has wrought its last dramatic destruction.

If the Old river levee at Torras caves under, the undaunted residents of Pointe Coupe parish who stand today in the most northerly part of unflooded West Bank, another parish of 600 square miles and 25,000 population will go under.

That surely, say the engineers, should be the end.

Or it may be the Morgansea sector of the Mississippi levee on the west bank, 35 miles north of Baton Rouge, or at Angola, on the east bank, 60 miles north of Baton Rouge. Everything depends upon how much water is yet to roll down the main channel from the confluence of the Old, Red and Mississippi to the gulf. Because of the undeterminable elements involved in the yesterday's breaks in the bayou dikes no one will know for several days what relief has been afforded the last reaches of the Mississippi by the breaks in the last barrier.

Melville Evacuated.

Rolling slowly southward behind the west levees of the Atchafalaya, the flood waters from northeastern Louisiana unleashed through the Bayou Des Glaises breaks had reached

'STELLA DALLAS' AT AMERICAN

Dramatic Story of Typical American Life.

"Stella Dallas," the stupendous film production which opens a four-day run Monday at the American theatre, a United Artists Corporation offering, directed by Henry King and presented by Samuel Goldwyn, is a vividly dramatic modern story of typical American life.

It depends not upon the usual motion pictures "bokum" of wild chases, runaway stage coaches, prairie fires, or battles for the dramatic element, but rather, upon the sincere, talented interpretations of typical American characters by a cast of unquestioned ability and popularity.

Henry King, to whose lot has fallen the direction of many of the screen's great success, says "Stella Dallas" contains more real drama, intermingled with the lighter moments, than any story he has yet interpreted for the screen.

One of the high lights of this story is the unswerving faith and love for her mother, played by Belle Bennett, faithfully enacted by Lois Moran, Samuel Goldwyn's most recent discovery. The little girl, and later, the young woman, fully cognizant of her mother's shortcomings, remains blue true to the end, preferring to sacrifice friends, a beautiful home and the companionship of worth-while people which she really craved, rather than forsake her mother, whose every living ambition and desire has ever been wrapped up in the daughter.

There is one episode where, humiliated by her mother's uncouth appearance and manners, before the fastidious crowd of young folks who were the girl's intimates, Laurel insists that they leave at once the resort where they are vacationing. That night, aboard the sleeper, both hear the same crowd of thoughtless youngsters merrily ridiculing Stella Dallas and sympathizing with Laurel over her mother's appearance.

The scene is one which will remain indelibly stamped upon the memory. The suffering of the mother at the realization of the probable humiliation of her daughter, and her "opossum playing" in order that Laurel, if awake, might believe she slept through the heartless conversation, rivals the concern of the girl, her slipping quietly from her upper berth to investigate, her relief at finding the mother apparently sleeping, and her slipping under the covers to pass the remainder of the night cuddling next to her dearest possession—Mother!

Another situation is that where Stella, finally determined to sacrifice everything that her daughter might have every advantage, and realizing her former husband's love for his earlier sweetheart, played by Alice Joyce, voluntarily goes to her rival and offers to divorce the husband, portrayed by Ronald Colman, if the pair will marry and take Laurel into their beautiful home.

And when the loyal little Laurel discovers this sacrifice she haughtily informs her father and his wife that never, "as long as her mother lived" would she dwell apart from her.

Failing in this play, Stella Dallas makes the supreme sacrifice marrying a man for whom she has no love, and deceiving her litle daughter whom she loves more than life itself, into believing her fickle and heartless.

Kaynee Wash Suits FOR BOYS

A year's time brings a surprising growth to boys from 2 to 8 years. No doubt your son has outgrown his last year's wash suits and needs a new supply for this Spring. Of course every Mother is looking for serviceability in boys' washtogs. A healthy, sturdy boy needs to give vent to his energy and play instincts and his clothes must allow him free play.

You will will find the Kaynee Washtogs entirely satisfactory in the respect of durability. Made of the best of fabrics, they stand an enormous amount of wear. Every seam is double stitched. No chance is taken with the buttons—they are on to stay. Every detail is finished in a way that puts to shame even women's garments.

Not only are they durable, but they combine smariness and style with their serviceability. They are well tailored, manly little models with plenty of pockets to hold a boy's dear possessions.

We are now showing our new Spring display of these well-known washtogs. Among them are the button-on styles and the very popular belted Flapper suits. The latter are particularly in favor now.

These Kaynee washtogs come in all the gay new colors—shades of tan, blue, orange, green, etc., and keep their colors too, after many launderings.

There are broadcloths, linens, ginghams and suitings. Some are all of one color—others have plain color pants and dotted or striped waists. White collars and cuffs—embroidered motifs and other trimming features.

Sizes 2 to 8 years. Priced from $1.95 to $5.75.

Youth of the Atlas

BY MARSHALL D. HALL
AUTHOR OF "THE VALLEY OF STRIFE" AND "RIDDLE OF THE CIRCLE" ETC. ETC.

SYNOPSIS.

LARRY GRENFALL, American traveler and student of Eastern magic, receives a telephone call from BEN MANSOUR, cosmopolite and old friend, saying he must see him at once.

GILES, Mansour's servant, drives Larry to his friend's house. While the two are talking a turbanned head appears at the window, Mansour opens it and a Moor steps in. He gives Mansour a ring as a token, set with a magnificent ruby. Mansour throws it on a table. Through the Moor it is revealed that Mansour is a Moor and ruler of his tribe. For some reason he must die but he insists that his son rule after him. Mansour says that he has taken poison and the Moor goes, tossing into the room a tiny ivory tiger—the Striped Death Mansour asks Grenfall if he will go to Morocco, find the Temple, endure the Ordeal and crush the Group—all of which is Greek to Grenfall. He is to find a certain Omar ben Medjad. Then Mansour dies. Giles has instructions to open a certain trunk and take care of the letters he will find therein.

Giles and Grenfall open the trunk, finding Mansour's will and a letter to Grenfall asking him to carry out the instructions he gave him before he died. Grenfall takes the ruby ring and tells Giles he is going to Morocco.

Larry arrives in Morocco and is solicited for alms by a mendicant.

CHAPTER SIX.

Larry's heart bounded and he paused, fumbling in a packet. Apparently he was having trouble finding change. The beggar's voice whined again:

"By the token, Allah shall bless the giver of alms, O lordly one; by the token."

Larry suppressed a start. He had purposely fumbled about his pockets, expecting the mendicant to speak, to voice low-whispered directions as to where Omar ben Medjad's shop might be. Could the fellow be wanting proof that he was the one who would come seeking Omar? He wondered; then turning his hand he let the flickering glow from a sickly, nearby torch, fall on the palm. Briefly, the ruby reflected from its thousand facets the dull light. Now the mendicant spoke again, a low gasp:

"The Eye of the Prophet!"

Larry lowered his hand and thrust it back within his pocket. This time when it came forth it held a small piece of silver. He tossed it carelessly to the Doukkala beggar and heard his nasal whine again, interspersed with whispers:

"May Allah bless you—follow me as I turn—until the Seventh Day—stay not too close—ah, you are kind—lose not sight of me—father of a thousand mercies!"

On the words of the mendicant turned and moved slowly off in the crowd. Larry followed, taking care to move carelessly, but keeping the Doukkala beggar in sight from the corner of his eye. He noticed a tiny bit of scarlet flaring on the back of the man's bournouse, as though it had been patched there. Instantly, his admiration rose. In a land of dirty brown bournouses, the mendicant had realized that it would be next to impossible to follow any particular one of them through a crowd, and he placed the psuedo patch as an eye-guide that could not be missed. Larry, grateful for the man's thoughtfulness, walked slowly after him.

Now he was in thke heart of the crowd, his face serene, but his ears drinking in low mutterings of uncompimentary nature, spoken for the most part in the Chleuh dialect. An infidel dog in the midst of the Believers! Had it not been for the menacing eye of the fortress in the shadow of the hills, he knew that ere long a curved thin blade would reach him and another mysterious killing would be charged up to Morocco.

Red Patch suddenly left the crowd and darted down a dark alleyway. Larry, reaching it, paused briefly. Little liking was in him for the looks of the place, but there seemed nothing else for it, so he stepped forward and was almost instantly swallowed up in intense darkness. Red Patch had vanished. Taking three steps forward, Larry stopped. His foot had touched something; in fact, he had nearly stumbled over it. He stopped, the while his right hand grasped the butt of an automatic, and felt that the thing which he had kicked was a human body! Now, he heard a voice:

"'Tis I, Abdu Madullah. Do you take my burnouse, continue straight down the alleyway to the first crossway to your left. Go down that to the fifth door on your right and knock thrice, then twice. Hasten."

Silently Larry took the burnouse and threw it about him, sensing that the man had partly risen and was fumbling at him. He bent again.

"My turban," the other whispered. "Set it upon your head, then go."

In exactly one minute Larry, ostensibly as much a Moor as he had previously been an American, left the mendicant and hastened down the alley as best he could, since he could barely see a yard ahead of him. He had progressed, he judged, for three minutes, then he heard a cry behind, recognizing the voice of the beggar:

"Ai, ai, an infidel dog has struck me down and robbed me; ai, ai, this way."

Startled, Larry wondered if this were a trap; if he had been lured here for the purpose of murder and robbery. He accelerated his pace until he was running in the darkness, then saw that he had reached the crossway. Rapidly he swung around the corner to his left, watching closely for the doorways as he did so. His heart pounding a little he stopped before the door of the fifth house on the right hand side of the alley in the direction he was going. He heard a hue and cry behind him, voices shouting curse and threats; he lifted his hand and knocked thrice, then twice.

Instanly the door swung open and he was grasped and pulled inside, into sheer darkness. Instinctively he ducked his head and his hand dropped to his gun. He heard shouts close by and knew his pursuers had turned the corner. The door closed softly and a hand grasped him gently by the arm.

"Silence," he heard a voice hiss.

Then hue and cry swept by the door, making the alleyway ring with the racket and hubbub. As the sounds died out the hand on his arm tugged gently and he was led along a narrow hallway and down a short flight of steps. Through another door he was led, then saw a dull sliver light, as though it were shining from beneath still another portal. To this his guide led him. He opened the door and they stepped into a lighted room. Larry turned and looked at his host.

A gaunt, stoop-shouldered man with a patch over one eye and a matted beard stood beside him, his one good eye gleaming brightly in the dull glow of the lamp.

The individual pointed toward a pile of cushions.

"Be seated, moulay," he said.

"You will tell me where I will find Omar—"

The other's uplifted hand checked him.

"It is wise that names sometimes be left unsaid. I am he you seek. The Doukkala mendicant waited for three successive days. You are late?"

"Now, in Allah's name, how do you know that?" Larry gasped. "As for that, how did you know I would be here at all?"

"Allah's ways are mysterious and wonderful; who am I to say how certain things come to pass?"

"Which is your polite Moroccan way of telling me it's none of my damned business how the word reached you," Larry snapped.

"As moulay wills," the other answered humbly.

"Well," said Larry, "what now?"

"Is that for me to say?"

Larry gave it up.

"I seek a thing in a temple," he said. "I have promised one whom we both know that I will find both and give the one to you."

"Moulay has a token that might indicate he speaks with authority?" The other's voice was studiously without accent, seemingly lifeless, yet the one good eye was agleam with interest.

"I have this," said Larry, and turned his hand palm upward. The other looked at it, bowing humbly.

"It is sufficient. We shall go where we may talk. Come."

'STELLA DALLAS' AT AMERICAN

Dramatic Story of Typical American Life.

"Stella Dallas," the stupendous film production which opens a four-day run Monday at the American theatre, a United Artists Corporation offering, directed by Henry King and presented by Samuel Goldwyn, is a vividly dramatic modern story of typical American life.

It depends not upon the usual motion pictures "bokum" of wild chases, runaway stage coaches, prairie fires, or battles for the dramatic element, but rather, upon the sincere, talented interpretations of typical American characters by a cast of unquestioned ability and popularity.

Henry King, to whose lot has fallen the direction of many of the screen's great success, says "Stella Dallas" contains more real drama, intermingled with the lighter moments, than any story he has yet interpreted for the screen.

One of the high lights of this story is the unswerving faith and love for her mother, played by Belle Bennett, faithfully enacted by Lois Moran. Samuel Goldwyn's most recent discovery. The little girl, and later, the young woman, fully cognizant of her mother's shortcomings, remains blue true to the end, preferring to sacrifice friends, a beautiful home and the companionship of worth-while people which she really craved, rather than forsake her mother, whose every living ambition and desire has ever been wrapped up in the daughter.

There is one episode where, humiliated by her mother's uncouth appearance and manners, before the fastidious crowd of young folks who were the girl's intimates, Laurel insists that they leave at once the resort where they are vacationing. That night, aboard the sleeper, both hear the same crowd of thoughtless youngsters merrily ridiculing Stella Dallas and sympathizing with Laurel over her mother's appearance.

The scene is one which will remain indelibly stamped upon the memory. The suffering of the mother at the realization of the probable humiliation of her daughter, and her "opossum playing" in order that Laurel, if awake, might believe she slept through the heartless conversation, rivals the concern of the girl, her slipping quietly from her upper berth to investigate, her relief at finding the mother apparently sleeping, and her slipping under the covers to pass the remainder of the night cuddling next to her dearest possession—Mother!

Another situation is that where Stella, finally determined to sacrifice everything that her daughter might have every advantage, and realizing her former husband's love for his earlier sweetheart, played by Alice Joyce, voluntarily goes to her rival and offers to divorce the husband, portrayed by Ronald Colman, if the pair will marry and take Laurel into their beautiful home.

And when the loyal little Laurel discovers this sacrifice she haughtily informs her father and his wife that never, "as long as her mother lived" would she dwell apart from her.

Failing in this play, Stella Dallas makes the supreme sacrifice marrying a man for whom she has no love, and deceiving her litle daughter whom she loves more than life itself, into believing her fickle and heartless.

Nicaragua Policy

The present Nicaragua situation is clearly shown in a document recently made public by the State Department. It is a letter delivered to Gen. Moncada, "rebel war chief," by Henry L. Stimson, President Coolidge's special envoy to Nicaragua. It reads:

"Concerning our conversation this morning, I have the honor to inform you that I am authorized to say that the president of the United States intends to accept the request of the Nicaragua government to supervise the election of 1928; that the retention of President Diaz during the remainder of his term is regarded as essential to that plan and will be insisted upon; that a general disarmament of the country also is regarded as necessary for the proper and successful conduct of such election, and that the forces of the United States will be authorized to accept the custody of the arms of those willing to lay them down, including the government, and to disarm forcibly those who will not do so."

This, of course, means frank intervention. Our government has intervened in Nicaragua and stopped the fighting and is going to disarm anybody on either side who starts anything, including the forces of the Diaz government which our government is upholding. More American marines are sent to enforce this policy. Uncle Sam is to remain in Nicaragua and supervise a new election next year. After that—well it depends on circumstances.

Some call this "the new Monroe Doctrine." Some don't call it anything, but say it's necessary, to keep the peace in the continental neighborhood and safeguard the Panama canal. Others object. It will doubtless afford a fruitful topic for argument when congress meets again.

Windshield Warnings

Motorists breaking traffic rules are treated to a new kind of warning in Weston, Ont. Slips have been prepared on which all the usual traffic rules are printed. In case of infraction, one of these comprehensive slips is pasted on the erring driver's windshield, with the particular rule he has broken underlined. There is a postscript at the bottom stating that a second offense will mean arrest.

This ought to have a wholesome effect, and should be welcomed by motorists capable of taking a friendly hint.

There may be complications, however. A driver, after being subjected to this treatment, may be inclined to proceed through town with eyes glued to the list of traffic rules, instead of watching the traffic itself. Pasting anything on the windshield is not sanctioned much in this country any more. By distracting the attention of drivers and obscuring their view, it causes many mishaps.

Chewing Up Forests

The world's chicle forests are being chewed up by American gum chewers and their imitators in other lands. Certain varieties of trees whose sap is used in making chewing gum are killed by the necessary tapping, not immediately but within a few years. Thus the original stands in Central America and along the Amazon valley are slowly disappearing. Other regions in other parts of the world have already been tapped and are consequently doomed.

Lest anyone to whom gum chewing is an annoyance leap to the conclusion that that pastime will disappear along with the original trees, it should be said that cultivated plantations are to take the place of wild forests. Before extinction has actually overcome all the gum-producing trees in the world, manufacturers will have established plantations big enough to supply their growing needs.

Some other means must be sought to combat the chewing gum menace.

Mausoleums

A single lady dying in Albany, N. Y., leaves a fortune of $300,000, nine-tenths of which is set aside to build a mausoleum in her memory in the little town she came from.

That is a good and worthy deed if the mausoleum is to be devoted to the general service of the community. Then nobody will grudge the lady this method of perpetuating her memory. If it is entirely for the use of the donor, as in many a similar case, it bespeaks only a pitiful and foolish ambition.

The only monument worth anything is one built by others. The finest memorial is living memory of merits, passing on to succeeding generations without any effort of the one remembered.

The old Pharaohs got away with it, but the world today wants deeds rather than marble monuments.

Uncle Sam's "sphere of influence," it appears, is the Spanish-American territory between here and the Panama Canal. And the Spanish word for influence is "influenza," otherwise known as "flu."

For a nation that is supposed to have invented the art of war several thousand years ago, the Chinese don't seem to have got very far with it.

The president thinks the big flood is bad enough, without giving congress a chance to turn loose a flood of oratory about it.

The average motorist is less concerned about how many miles per gallon than than how many miles per hour.

When the birds build a home, they stay there and use it.

ANYHOW HE RODE

Two women with the decorations of an apartment as a commission, were passing on wallpaper, but had not finished their selections, when luncheon time arrived. The salesman had been particularly obliging and instructive and on the way out they asked the manager for his name.

"His name is Sheridan," said the manager.

By way of clinching recollection of the name they thought of "Sheridan's Ride," went out to luncheon and returned. On entering the main door one of them said to an employe:

"We would like to see Mr. Paul Revere."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 14.—No free attraction seems to attract so much attention in Manhattan as the display in the windows of sporting goods stores. Here pale clerks and others who lead sedentary lives stand riveted to dream awhile of the great outdoors.

It is a momentary hiatus from the riveting rat-a-tat, the clanging cars, screeching sirens and overtone of a metropolitan medley. The bookkeeper escapes from his figures and in an imaginative moment fits himself into wide pocketed hunting coats to flush quail. Or stalk deer.

The care worn stenographer dons flannel skirt and blazer to go swinging around the course. And the gnarled old A. D. T. messenger, with perhaps an atrophied dangling arm, stands fixed before a brace of guns listening to the baying of dogs treeing a bear.

Youth, middle and old age seem spellbound in presence of this citified call to the hills, the streams and forests. Long after traffic desolation groups will clot in front of the windows staring in the manner of birds charmed by the snake.

It offers a reverse picture of the prairie boy with his dog at the railroad crossing watching the dazzling and thundering overland express out of sight. Scores of pinch-faced cliff dwellers are always to be found in the expansive show rooms. Just loitering.

In the windows are braces of blue metal guns, saddles and quirks, nickel plated reels and collapsible rods, dude wrangling dinner sets in alligator cases, pocket shaving outfits, thick soled hunting boots, breakfast tomtoms, pup tents, forest library sets, camp radios and the like.

There are archery sets, ping pong boards, checkers, chess, waterproof playing cards, shuffle board, tree hammocks, gaudy golf hose, red hunting coats, red silk bandanas, snake bite serum in bright nickel plated boxes, full lined gloves and sun goggles.

It was Fred C. Kelly who espied a nattily dressed man in a crowded subway express carrying an ax. "Ah," observed Kelly to a friend, "a woodsman from Brooklyn."

The one gallused boy with the crownless straw hat who slings a shot gun over his shoulder, calls his hound Drum and swings off on a long hunt would doubtless be bewildered at the trappings for the modern hunters. There are even manicure sets for them.

In those pleasant chain restaurants featuring a background of marble and mirror will always be found a sprinkling of lone and middle aged New York ladies. Sometimes they come in pairs but usually they are alone. One has the impression it is their idea of a night out to dine in the clatter of the glass topped tables. They linger—and most of them indulge a cigarette over the coffee. And doubtless they go back to cheerless rooms—several flights up and all the way back and solitude. Some are those living on slight incomes but the majority are office women showing the pinch of under-salaried lives.

I once started conversation with a middle aged lady at an adjoining table in one of those "Southern cooking" places. She told me that outside of the lady who conducted the rooming house where she lived she had not talked to another soul in 10 days. "And," she added, "down in my Georgian town I was considered the gabbiest woman there."

Lonely Clubs in Manhattan have been numerous but never successful. The idea of being tagged as lonely dries up conversation. And after one visit few return.

It is my opinion there is no excuse for loneliness in New York. The big problem here is to get away from people.

HASKIN'S LETTER
By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Life Insurance.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 14.—The life insurance business is ever now and then getting a bad rap, such as that unfolded by the murder trial in New York which revealed that a man might be insured for an amount that he did not know anything about, under a double indemnity clause to which he was a stranger, and then find himself the object of a coroner's inquest, with a faithless wife and her paramour held to account for his sudden demise.

Husbands who are not exactly certain where their wives have been spending week-ends will be poor prospects for life insurance salesmen for some time—at least until that affair over on Long Island gets off the first page of the newspapers and a home-loving man can hang a picture without shuddering over the thought of what deadly uses can be made of the wire. It is even possible that some policies will be canceled by cautious individuals who think that they may live longer if not so heavily insured.

However, in spite of all such handicaps the life insurance business is carrying on bravely and is what might be termed one of the major industries of the world. There are 357 companies in the United States and they have assets aggregating almost $13,000,000,000, with insurance in force totaling more than $80,000,000,000.

Fifty-two of the larger companies held at the close of the last calendar year city mortgages worth $3,123,000,000, farm mortgages of $1,960,000,000, railroad stocks and bonds with a value of $2,435,000,000, government obligations to the amount of $1,116,000,000, and public utility securities to the extent of $819,000,000. These 52 companies had 92.4 per cent of the assets of all the life insurance companies in the United States.

It is impossible to state, with accuracy, how many individuals are covered by the vast amount of insurance in force, because many of the insured carry more than one policy. Leroy A. Lincoln, general counsel of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, estimates, however, that at least 58,000,000 people are protected by life insurance for an average, per person, of about $1,400, or, exclusive of industrial insurance, about $2,600.

Largely for City Dwellers.

Substantially all this insurance is on the lives of city dwellers. Rural families—residents on farms and in communities of less than 2,500 inhabitants—are difficult to reach, and, hence, are still largely out of the field of life insurance protection, according to Mr. Lincoln. In the cities, in marked contrast, there is scarcely a home without one or more insurance policies, and there are cities in which the number of policies in force exceeds the total population.

Last year American policyholders and their beneficiaries were paid $1,350,000,000 by the life insurance companies. Death claims were paid to the beneficiaries of 500,000 insured persons. In 20 years more than $14,000,000,000 has been paid to policy holders and their beneficiaries—about $6,000,000,000 in death claims and $8,000,000,000 to living policyholders.

One of the services which life insurance companies render the public in addition to paying death benefits and acting as savings banks, so to speak, is illustrated by a housing enterprise in New York. The law of that state limited life insurance real estate holdings practically to the real estate needed for their own occupancy in the conduct of their own business, but when there was a serious shortage of cheap housing about five years ago the legislature amended that law in an unusual fashion. It did not authorize the life insurance companies to go as far as they liked in the matter of acquiring real estate nor did it encourage them in the erection of skyscrapers for big business or high rental apartments for the wealthy class.

Instead the legislature authorized the companies to own real estate upon which there should be erected dwelling houses or apartments to be rented for not to exceed nine dollars per room per month. That is regarded as an extremely low rent. One company undertook the experiment, Mr. Lincoln relates, and constructed

"Knockout Reilly" Opens Engagement on Monday.

Starred in a fast moving film of a young steel puddler whose ability with his fists wins him fistic fame, and the girl of his dreams, Richard Dix arrives at the Ceramic theatre Monday.

"Knockout Reilly," is the name of his latest Paramount screen effort, and it is reputed by those in the know, to be the most engrossing Dix offering ever. Reports from the large centers indicate an enthusiastic reception of the picture, and critics are putting it on a par with the "Quarterback," his famous football film.

As Dundee Reilly, Dix works in a steel mill and on Saturday night goes out in search of a little recreation and romance. Although professing utter disregard of all girls, he is immensely flattered when he receives a message purporting to be from Mary Malone, (Mary Brian) pretty entertainer in a cabaret that he and his friends frequent. The message invites him backstage to meet her, and not knowing that this is a little joke of his friends, he leaves his table and goes to her dressing room. He finds there Killer Agerra (Jack Renault), champion pugilist making advances to Mary and without knowing who he is knocks him out. Later Agerra reciprocates by decoying Reilly to his gymnasium and bearing him up. Reilly looking for revenue puts himself in the hands of Pat Malone, Mary's brother, himself a former pugilist, for training and rapidly rises to gladiatorial eminence. Complications set in and Reilly on the eve of a championship fight with Agerra finds himself railroaded to prison for two years for felonious assault. How he manages to keep in condition notwithstanding his confinement, and how on his release he clears his name, and wins the girl and the championship, are unfolded in a series of dramatic scenes in which the light humorous touch of director Malcolm St. Clair is always evident. Events move rapidly to a smashing denouement, in which Dix proves again that he is an athlete as well as an actor of versatility.

Do you know who the bride and groom will be at Rock Springs wedding, opening day?

apartment buildings that have proved to be excellent investments in addition to affording modern, pleasant, and attractive homes for a great many people. Longevity and Cheaper Rates.

Insurance companies, or those who control them, naturally are interested in seeing people enjoy good health and live long, and they have found it "good business" to do all in their power to bring that about. This brings them into the field of welfare work.

"Life insurance is inseparably associated with length of life," says Mr. Lincoln. "The longer people live, the cheaper life insurance becomes for all. The longer people live and are able to follow their accustomed pursuits, the greater is the asset of human values in the nation's balance sheet. The longer good health and activity continue, the greater the sum total of happiness and their families.

"These conclusions, give them separately what weight you will, have led to the concept of longevity as a proper aim of life insurance company service. The field is large and its cultivation is hardly more than begun, but remarkable achievements have already demonstrated the soundness of the attempt."

Mr. Lincoln cites one company which reports that the average length of life among its policyholders in the United States and Canada has increased nine years during the last 15 years in which it has maintained a nursing service and distributed welfare literature. Its figures show that there were in 1926 63,330 fewer deaths among its policyholders than would have been the case had the death rate of 1911 prevailed, and statisticians have made a computation showing a saving of 417,628 lives in the 15-year period, which, translated into death claims, means a saving of $71,550,000.

Insofar as life insurance has contributed to the public health through its constant fight against preventable disease and death, through campaigns of education, through periodical examinations of individuals, through promotion of community health, through demonstrations, surveys, and research work, its service to the public is something unknown in the experience of any other country in any period of history.

And it is pointed out, further, that this service is not limited to the individuals with whom the companies have direct policyholder relations.

"While serving them primarily and preeminently," says Mr. Lincoln, "life insurance carries its beneficial help into every community and every home through the support extended by investments in public and private securities and through its notable work in behalf of the physical well-being and improvement of our population as a whole."

FLOYD STREITENBERGER DEFENSE WILL REST MONDAY

EX-DETECTIVE CHARACTERIZES MAZER AS 'LIAR'

Canton Man Denies any Complicity in Mellett Murder.

WIFE ON STAND

Jury Probably Will Get Case Late Tuesday.

CANTON, O., May 14.—Promising to be the shortest of the Don R. Mellett murder cases to date, trial of Floyd E. Streitenberger, ex-police officer of Canton, charged with first degree murder, for alleged complicity in the killing of the youthful publisher of the Canton Daily News here last July 16, will enter the final stages Monday, when the defense is expected to rest. The jury of nine men and three women will probably get the case Tuesday.

Court was adjourned late Friday, over the week-end, after both prosecution and defense had agreed to the intermission.

Taking the stand in his own behalf, Friday afternoon, Streitenberger denied every charge of the state. He declared he never held enmity against Don Mellett, the slain editor, denied ever seeing Patrick McDermott, convicted slayer of Mellett, previous to McDermott's trial, and denied discussing with Louis Mazer, former East Liverpool resident, any plan of attack on the publisher. He characterized Mazer as a "liar and a no-account bootlegger."

Repartee With Prosecutor.

Jointly indicted for the crime, Mazer turned state's evidence and the prosecution is said to base its strongest hope for conviction of the former detective, on his testimony.

Streitenberger asserted Mellett's editorials concerning him 'had not worried me any," and that he "didn't think much about them."

Mrs. Streitenberger, the defendant's wife, formerly of Wellsville, preceded her husband on the stand and engaged in some lively repartee with Prosecutor Henry Harter.

Harter asked Mrs. Streitenberger why she had invited Sadie Cook, alleged narcotic law violator, of Canton, to visit the Streitenberger home in Springfield, O.

"Because I would have been glad to meet anybody from Canton," the witness replied.

"Even me, I suppose?" said Harter with a trace of sarcasm.

Woman's Letter Introduced.

An objection by the defense to admitting as evidence a letter written by Mrs. Streitenberger to the Cook woman, was overruled. Among other things, the letter stated that they (Streitenbergers) "noticed there was plenty of trouble in Canton, and that we expect to be drawn into it."

Mrs. Streitenberger admitted writing the letter.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—"It looks like Cal and Al."

That's the way Chauncey M. Depew, veteran New York senator, figures the 1928 presidential race.

Here on his annual visit to the capital, the ex-senator said he believed there was no doubt about President Coolidge being renominated and he believed Gov. Al Smith was the logical Democratic nominee.

He predicted prohibition will not be an issue.

their search for documents which might establish a propaganda plot against the British government. The search also was for at least one important official document missing from British government archives.

Scotland Yard decided to cut through the wall when the Soviet representatives refused to surrender the keys to the room, claiming diplomatic immunity.

Fifty detectives, assisted by foreign office linguists and reinforced by scores of uniformed police, remained in control of Soviet House, headquarters of Arcos, Ltd., (all Russian cooperative society), while the seized documents, weighing seven tons, were being sorted and examined.

The act of breaking into the Soviet House vault seemed to make it clear that the government does not intend to recognize the demand of the Soviet trade delegation for diplomatic immunity. On the other hand the government was apparently determined to examine every inch of space and every scrap of paper, meanwhile exhausting every effort to recover the missing government document or prove that it had found its way into the hands of the Soviets.

The keen international interest in the dramatic contest to span the Atlantic in single jump is shown by the great numbers of messages being received from all parts of the world. News from Paris shows that the Americans will get a great and friendly reception if they make the flight successfully.

Dorothy Mackaye Pictures Slain Man As Wife Beater

LOS ANGELES, May 14.—Ray Raymond, musical comedy star, for whose death Paul Kelly, film actor, is on trial for murder, was pictured today as a drunkard and a wife beater.

The description was supplied by Raymond's widow, Dorothy Mackaye, stage actress, for whose love, the state charges, the strapping Kelly slew the song-and-dance man with his fists.

LOS ANGELES, May 14.—Dorothy Mackaye, stage actress and central figure in the Paul Kelly murder trial, issued a statement through her attorney today denying charges that she and Ray Raymond, for whose death the film player is on trial, were not legally married.

NEW YORK, May 14.—Florence Bain Raymond declared today that she is the real wife of Ray Raymond, the actor, for whose murder Paul Kelly is on trial at Los Angeles.

Mrs. Raymond claims that if Raymond and Dorothy Mackaye, a central figure in the tragedy, were married the marriage was not legal. The New York Mrs. Raymond said she and Raymond were married at Newark, N. J., on January 8, 1909, and were never divorced.

Rini Will Appeal

that no malice had been shown on the part of Rini, and that the verdict should not have been more than manslaughter. They also charged the verdict was against the weight of the evidence.

Referring to Mrs. Chorgas' testimony that Rini "was angry," O'Grady said:

"She is the person who, if the prosecuting attorney had not asked the jury to return a verdict of not guilty, would now be the defendant and the argument on a motion for a new trial would be in her behalf. She was the only possible one to commit the crime.

"We feel that the rights of Rini have been prejudiced by the prosecutor in asking the jury to acquit this woman. The prosecutor was afraid to leave the matter in the hands of the jury. I have a letter that passed between Marie and her sister, Rosie, the wife of Rini, and her evidence has been suppressed because we have not been able to place her on the stand. And we telegraphed her money to come, but we did not get our wish."

Prosecutor Answers O'Grady.

Prosecutor Brookes took strong exceptions to the remark that evidence had been suppressed. He then told the court that O'Grady had talked to Mrs. Chorgas at the county jail, and told her to "stick to the first story" and to make no reference to the cut on her wrist. Argument between counsel became heated, and Judge Lones cautioned both to "stick to the case and the motion."

Knepper advised the court it was he who phrased the text of the motion for a new trial, and this was done in the absence of O'Grady who was in Buffalo, N. Y.

"The claim of counsel of the supposed suppression of evidence amounts to nothing," Judge Lones said.

"They have not put up anything to support the motion," Brookes said. "The wound that caused the death of Patsy Anania is one that was made by a man who knows how to use a knife. A penknife was used. Sal Rini was the only one physically able to deliver the blow. Patsy Anania was a boxer and was without a chance to defend himself when he received the knife thrust. It could not have been a wound inflicted with suicidal intent, neither was it an accident. We see no error, and move for sentence."

New Trial Denied.

"Patsy Anania was killed or murdered in an apartment in East Liverpool," Judge Lones said. "Only two persons were present other than Anania. There was no evidence introduced during the trial of this case to show, and it is highly improbable, that he committed suicide, or that it was accidental.

"The jury are the whole judges of the facts. The court charges the law. The jury heard Marie Chorgas testify on the witness stand and she testified that she did not commit the act. The Defendant Rini also testified that he did not do it. The court was of the opinion there was sufficient evidence to convict Rini without the testimony of Marie Chorgas. There was testimony offered during the trial of a quarrel between the two men. The blow was more probably inflicted by a man than a woman. The wound inself indicates that the stab was delivered with great force to produce the result it did.

"Whether the Defendant Rini was guilty was a matter for the jury. The court is not likely to set aside the verdict of the jury, and the court is of the opinion the jury is right.

"The rights of the defendant were fully protected by able counsel. The question of manslaughter or second degree murder is also a question for the jury. Strong evidence of malice is the use of a weapon. One life has been destroyed—blotted out—which means suffering to the family of the deceased and also the very worthy family of Defendant Rini. Crime cannot be left unpunished. I believe no error has been committed, and that the defendant's rights have been fully protected. I am obliged to overrule a motion for a new trial."

Family Says "Goodbye."

Brookes then moved that sentence be passed.

"You may stand up," the court said to Rini.

After asking the usual question, Judge Lones said:

"It is the sentence of the court that you be sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary, and there confined during your natural life."

"Exceptions will be noted, and your record is preserved in the event you desire to appeal," Judge Lones said to O'Grady.

"We'll carry this case to the supreme court if we can get in," Knepper declared. "We certainly will go into the court of appeals."

In the custody of Deputy Sheriff Lawrence Kindsvatter, Rini was taken into the jury room to talk with his relatives.

Mrs. Snyder from the chair as seen in a statement issued by Mrs. Virginia Peters Parkhurst, Maryland, state director of the Susan B. Anthony foundation and a former candidate for the United States congress. She said the only question involved in the imposition of the death penalty in this case was "just how far backward does legalized murder take us into the age of cannibalism and into the age of blind reasoning founded upon a principle of barbarous retaliation."

Another to voice opposition to the death penalty was Justice Townsend Scudder who said he did not believe the state has the right to take human life.

The doomed woman has received scores of letters in which the writers promised to appeal to the governor for commutation of sentence.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKETS

NEW YORK, May 14.—Spirited bidding for the high-priced market "sensations" in the railroad, equipment, and specialty stocks constituted the principal feature of the short session of the market today.

Baldwin Locomotive, Nickel Plate Railroad common, Houston Oil and Coca Cola were the leaders in the new forward movement, but various market specialties in which a large short interest was supposed to be "locked up" in a terrific struggle with the bullish pools, were also pushed forward vigorously. As in the last two or three sessions, industrial and business news played an insignificant part in the movements of prices, the weekly trade reviews reporting considerable unsettlement in business.

Baldwin's 6-point jump to a record high price of 205½ in the first half-hour was attributed to pool activities, in which a group of powerful Chicago speculators hold the whip hand. Since only 200,000 shares of stock have been issued for Baldwin, the market supply is extremely small, and the stock lends itself easily to manipulation by powerful professionals or groups. Valuable property rights rather than big earnings and a liberal dividend policy constitute the only basis for the speculative demand for the stock.

Stock of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad pushed above 180 for the first time in the history of the road. Nickel Plate also bettered yesterday's best price by a point or two while Erie, Reading and other well-known railroad stocks were buoyant.

A 5 per cent increase in bank clearings, compared with the same week last year, considered in conjunction with the weekly increase in car loadings, was regarded as evidence of the healthy condition of general business, even though the weekly trade reviews found considerable spottiness in the domestic trade situation. The floods and the unseasonable weather are still a handicap to southern trade and production, the latter including the crop situation in the cotton and wheat belts.

Producers and refiners joined Houston Oil in the "rampage" of favored oil stocks, the balance of the oils display a reactionary tone when it was discovered that a number of the seminole producers are not inclined to unite in the curtainment program agreed upon at a conference in New York this week. Producers and refiners, controlled by Humble Oil company has only a few shares in the available "floating" supply.

Week-end selling of cotton and grain in New York and outside markets resulted in a moderate decline in prices, but the commodity markets as a whole were steady, with few changes of importance.

a prosperous negro lawyer of Washington, D. C.

Congratulations are due Secretary of War Davis for his mobilization of airplanes at San Antonio from all over the country. With no fatal accident, 103 planes have gathered at the rendezvous, flying a total of more than 200,000 miles. And when the fliers return to their bases the total flight will exceed 400,000 miles.

Especially gratifying was the achievement of the swift pursuit plane formation, the fliers driving on through fog and storm, 1,300 miles in one day, the longest flight ever accomplished by so large a body of fliers.

Non bis in idem, is a motto worth remembering.

Each generation should have its own ideas. When his congregation in the lowlands, near Parkins, Arkansas, were told by their pastor that a flood was coming, and they should build an ark, they hastily built one, and crowded into it, with pigs, chickens, mules, wives and children.

Sure enough the flood came, crawling over the land, and the colored pastor stood high in the estimation of his flock, rejoicing in the ark.

Then, alas, water poured in through many leaks. The hull was not caulked, and the ark would not float. When the water rose a foot and a half the congregation waded to a railroad embankment and decided that theirs was a different flood.

Experts from New Foundland give faint hope that Nungesser and his companion may be alive. If, by good fortune, they have landed in New Foundland, it might take many days for them to reach a settlement.

Hardy, courageous men, they would be able to endure and survive great hardships.

Melville, a village of 1,200 population 25 miles south of the bayou and the first large center in the path of the new spillway, is to suffer from four to six feet of water. It is being evacuated by about half its residents while the remaining half stand by to build elevated sidewalks to the banks, telegraph offices, railroad station, postoffice and newspaper plant.

From St. Landry, the second largest cotton producing parish in Louisiana, the waters will flow to Ibera, which houses about 26,000; St. Martin, 22,000; Assumption, 15,000; Iberville, 27,000, and St. Mary, 3,100, and so to the sea.

The Moreauville crevasse, which began yesterday morning as a 150-foot gap poured off a seven-foot wall of water over a stretch more than 800 feet wide. Property losses in the southern parishes must reach at least $5,000,000, according to state agricultural surveys.

Distribute Rescue Craft.

Although thousands had disregarded the evacuation warning of the relief agencies throughout the region south of the Bayou Des Glaises, the strategic distribution of rescue craft along the Old and Red rivers is believed to have averted loss of life.

Several negroes who had remained too long at work on the sliding levees were given first aid treatment on coast guard patrol boats last night, but no death had been reported today from the newly stricked region.

SIMILARITY
which ends with appearance

LIKE twins, two oils may look exactly alike; and like twins, they may be entirely different in temperament.

From the motorist's standpoint, this is unfortunate. A rugged motor oil with a high flash and fire test, one capable of withstanding terrific motor heats, may look exactly like another oil which is puny and wholly incapable of protecting your motor against these ravages of fire and friction.

Take no chances. Ask for FREEDOM PERFECT Motor Oil by name. Obtain this combination of 100% Pennsylvania Crude plus forty-eight years of refining experience.

Dealers dispensing Freedom Perfect Motor Oil are men of responsibility. They chose Freedom Perfect because they are interested in you and your desires to get long service from that engineering masterpiece under your hood, your motor.

This lubricant is on sale everywhere throughout this district.

One question for each day is provided. The parent will find it interesting and helpful to have the child take up the question each day and aid it in finding the answer in the Scriptures, thus developing a knowledge of the Bible and where to find in it the things decided. Send or bring the little folks to the class Sunday at 1:45 p. m. The "Ceramic Cafeteria Auditorium," 121 West Fifth Street.

653. Why should the church class be represented by the first river that is mentioned?
Answer: Because they are the first ones that get eternal life. (Revelation 20:67. They are to have part in "the first resurrection." See also Hebrews 11:39, 40.

654. In Revelation 7:4; 14:1 it is shown that of the true church class there will be 144,000 and in Revelation 3:20 it is shown that these will "sit in the throne"—they are to be the kings or rulers over the earth. What is said about another classes in Revelation 7:9-17?
Answer: "And, lo, I behold a great multitude which no man could number . . . stood before the throne," etc. The 15th verse shows that they are not in the throne but "before the throne," and that they serve God day and night in the temple. They are to be servants and not kings. Nevertheless, they are to be very happy. See verses 16 and 17.

655. What third class is mentioned in the 11th chapter of Hebrews?
Answer: The ancient worthies—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, all the other faithful ones who lived before Christ.

656. Are they to have a different resurrection than the world in general?
Answer: They are to have "a better resurrection" than the world in general (Hebrews 11:35), and yet it is not as good as the church will receive. See Hebrews 11:39, 40.

657. Were their promises heavenly or earthly promise?
Answer: They were all earthly. See, for example the promise made to Abraham in Genesis 13:12, 14, 15.

658. Are they to "be made perfect," and if so, they will be perfect as what?
Answer: Yes, they shall "be made perfect" (Hebrews 11:40) and this perfection will be that of human beings because they were not promisd a heavenly reward, but an earthly one.

659. What fourth class does "the great river Euphrates" (Rev. 16:12) seem to symbolize?
Answer: We believe it symbolizes those of the great world of mankind who set themselves apart to do the Lord's will, when they hear, during the reign of Christ, the wonderful story of God's great love for them and the provisions He has made in Christ for them. Theirs will not be "a resurrection of (perfect) life," but instead theirs will be "a resurrection of judgment." See John 5:28, 29 R. V. That is to say, they will be put on trial for everlasting life and not get perfect life at once like the other three classes.

BE IN CHURCH SUNDAY

Old Jerusalem Rocked By Mysterious Phenomenon

Strange Spiritual Outburst, Without Precedent, Set City Into Commotion, and Established Christian Church on New Course of Conquest.

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS.

We do not know of a certainty even the dates of all the nine different occasions throughout the centuries upon which the City of Jeruslaem was completely destroyed; but the whole civilized world keeps count of the strange experiences wherein the infant Christian Church was set ablaze by the mysterious fires of Pentecost. Such are the vivid contrasts between what is material and what is spiritual. Life's real milestones are always something that has happened within the heart of man. Beliefs are more powerful than armies. As a matter of demonstrable experience, faith's victories outrank those of force. Pentecost has meant more to the world than the conquests of Sargon or Rameses the Great or Alexander or Julius on which the City of Jerusalem was Caesar or Jenghis Khan or Napoleon.

Nobody can explain Pentecost: we can only record it. Certainly something happened at the first great Jewish Festival in Jerusalem following the Crucifixion. That something happened in particular to Peter, who is the central figure of this course of Lessons, and also to the whole Christian company. And the consequences of that something are still a traceable influence in the whole world.

"Oh What a Change."

Let us get hold of that clear-cut fact. After the arrest of Jesus, Peter had been down and out, a scared, swearing, heart-broken renegade. All of his bombast had been deflated. Then followed the marvel—as incredible to the disciples as it has been to any sceptic since—of the Resurrection. That miracle revived the fainting hearts of the scattered flock. Again and again the Risen Christ appeared to them. Once more the company cohered. They clung to the proved wonder of the Resurrection as they had once clung to their Lord in person. It welded them into oneness. A common grief and a common task made them a community of love. Thenceforth life offered them principally an opportunity to carry on as representatives of their risen Lord.

Contrast all that with a contemporary situation. High brows are wrinkled these days over the apaprent moral slump in the circles of educated young people, as illustrated by the student suicides. Clearly, learning of itself does not necessarily carry with it a moral uplift. An increasing number of sober observers are questioning the vital power of mere education and "progress" and social advancemen...

Yet now, as at Pentecost, the truth of the Resurrection, and of the enduement from above, is making over ugly lives into loveliness; timid lives into heroism; selfish lives into vicariousness. The change in Peter and his companions was no greater than the change in individual persons known to us in our own neighborhood, and in Christian converts in Uganda and China and Persia and Egypt. Characters are changed by Christ. The Gospel, sincerely stated and truly accepted, does transform men and women and communities.

Though all the world totters, let us hold fast to this central effect of the Christian religion. There is a cure for souls with Christ. All that is seriously wrong with human society, with human homes, with human lives, may be made right by the coming of the Saviour. The power that lifted Peter up from the slough of denial in the courtyard of Caiapas to the heights of Pentecost, still persists and prevails.

When Tongues of Fire Fell.

Those early Christians were fond of getting together, as folk who are congenial in essential things always are. There was no need of an advertising, "Go-To-Church Campaign," to call the disciples to their assemblies. This simple, brotherly unity is the first fact to be noted in this miracle of Pentecost which is our Lesson. And while they were met, here is what befell—I quote the Moffatt Translation:

> "Suddenly there came a sound from heaven like a violent blast of wind, which filled the whole house where they were seated. They saw tongues like flames distributing themselves, one resting on the head of each, and they were all filled with the holy Spirit—they began to speak in foreign tongues, as the Spirit enabled them to express themselves. Now there were devout Jews from every nation under heaven staying in Jerusalem. So when this sound was heard, the multitude gathered in bewilderment, for each heard them speaking in his own language. All were amazed and astonished."

A miracle Of course: what occasion better merited a miracle than the formal fulfilment of the promise of Christ that He would send His Spirit upon His friends? This was the inauguration of the Church Militant. Herein was the empowerment of Christianity for its world task.

That the roar and commotion of it should shake the city was amazing, yet logical. This was the beginning of a new era in the spiritual life of mankind. The supreme mystery of the Lord's promised Other Self, the Paraclete, was fulfilled at Pentecost. Signs and wonders attended it, which is only commensurate with the importance of the event. If God is ever to display His peculiar power on earth, what occasion could better warrant it than this Day of Pentecost, when the Spirit descended in symbolic tongues of fire, quivering above the head of each disciple, to signify that henceforth the Church had found her voice for all races and peoples and nations?

Of course, Jerusalem was set by the ears. Everybody wondered. Men from far-flung Jewry, in the city for the festival, marveled aloud at this demonstration of a universal-tongued fulfilment of prophecy. Scarcely had the old capital been so stirred even on the day of Crucifixion.

This was the original justification for a city-wide revival of religion. It was Scriptural, spiritual and sensational, turning hearers to self-examination, to contrition, confession and conversion. As I sat amidst a theatre full of hungry-hearted men and women, a few days ago, in a Lenten noon service, I pondered upon our failure to provide more mass opportunities for seeking spirits to find soul-satisfaction. When real religion speaks, everybody is ready to listen.

At Pentecost, it was Peter,—a new, rehabilitated, restored Peter, now sure of himself only because sure of his Lord, who had forgiven and commissioned him—who stood up to interpret the wonders of the occasion. What a spectacle of blazing bravery he was! This Book of Acts is the book of boldness, because a record of the doings of Spirit-filled men. Timorous souls are made strong and fearless by a perusal of this record of what Pentecost did for a commonplace crowd of Christians. Courage in witness-bearing is a first fruit of spiritual power. Pentecost puts power into pulpits and pew.

While in Jerusalem, in 1919, I secured several olive-wood penholders, made by direction of Dr. John H. Finley, then Director of the American Red Cross in Palestine; and I have since done a large part of my writing with one of them. Each penholder was tipped with a red cross. I like the symbol. The pen that would write with power must bear the ensanguined cross; even as the sermon that would prevail must hold up the Cross of Christ.

Peter's great sermon at Pentecost was Christ-centered. It dwelt hardly at all upon the signs and marvels of the occasion, but went directly to a proclamation of the Redeemer. Fearlessly, Peter arraigned his hearers as those who had slain the Son of God. No preacher can prevail over hearers whom he pampers or fears. Scripture-saturated, the apostle's discourse centered upon Christ, the crucified. And it won three thousand converts in a day.

Ah, if the Christian Church—the sorely divided, contentious, world-tainted Church—could but again find her Pentecostal voice, and set forth Christ as the only Saviour and satisfaction for man's many needs, how quickly all lesser problems that puzzle our day would be solved! A clear presentation of the crucified, risen Redeemer is literally the greatest need of the world today.

To live content with small means; to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion; to be worthy, not respectable; and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages, with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never; in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious, grow up through the common—this is to be my symphony.—William Henry Channing.

A man that is young in years may be old in hours, if he has lost no time.—Francis Bacon.

Never ascribe to an opponent motives meaner than your own.—James M. Barrie.

Howe'er it be, it seems to me,
'Tis only noble to be good.

CHURCH CORNER STONE SERVICE AT MIDLAND ON SUNDAY, MAY 22

Presbyterians Erecting $95,000 House of Worship.

$80,000 PLEDGED

Dr. Floyd W. Barr, Beaver Falls, to Deliver Address.

Corner stone of the new Midland Presbyterian church, being erected in Ohio avenue, opposite the Lincoln high school, will be placed in position at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, May 22.

The address will be delivered by Dr. Floyd W. Barr, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Beaver Falls. Special music will be a feature. Rev. Charles W. Cochran, pastor of the church, will be in charge of the ceremonies.

The new church and manse and the lot will cost approximately $95,000. Members and their friends have pledged $46,000 on a 50-month pay ment plan. From the sale of the old church property $19,000 was realized, while the Beaver presbytery contributed $10,000 and officers of the Crucible Steel company, $5,000, a total of $80,000.

The new church will be white stone in construction, while the manse adjoining will be stucco and trimmed in stone. Seating capacity of the main auditorium in the house of worship will be 300. It will have a basement and a Sunday school room, also. The manse will have eight rooms and a bath.

The Cook-Anderson company, of Beaver, holds the contract for the church parsonage, while Herbert McCullough, Pittsburgh, is the architect. The church will be ready for occupancy on or about January 1, 1928.

The Midland congregation was organized about 20 years ago, when a church and manse were erected at the corner of Seventh street and Penn avenue. This property was sold several months ago, the church to be the site of a proposed apartment building.

Since the first of the year the congregation has been conducting Sunday services in the State theatre.

Present membership of the church is 245.

Rev. Mr. Cochran came to Midland in January, 1926, from Summerville, Pa. He succeeded Rev. Grover C. Fohner, who resigned to become assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian church at New Castle, Pa.

Pending the razing of the old church at Seventh street and Penn avenue, it is being used as the Pentecostal mission.

Learning makes a good man better, and an ill man worse.—John Garth.

I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely.—Revelation 21:6.

Old friends, old scenes, will lovelier be,
As more of heaven in each we see;
Some softening gleam of love and prayer
Shall dawn on every cross and care.

STRAND OFFERS MODERN STORY

May McAvoy Heads Cast of "Matinee Ladies."

Romance—in the hearts of a Broadway gigolo and a cabaret cigarette girl. That is the subject matter of Warner Bros.' production of "Matinee Ladies," starring May McAvoy which comes to the Strand theatre on Monday.

Back of this romance is a picture of rich and fashionable wives who have lost interest in their fat and bald husbands and who yearn for amorous adventures with younger men during the long afternoons. This demand has been satisfied in New York where these matinee ladies are probably to be found in greatest abundance at the afternoon cabarets where impecunious young men who dance divinely are easy to meet.

Bob, played by Malcolm MacGregor, is one of thes easy-to-meet young men. The money he earns as a dancing man saves his college career when it seems that nothing can. Thus he meets the cabaret cigarette girl (May McAvoy). They fall in love, but each suspects the other. Can she love a dancing man? Is a cigarette girl in such a place worth his love? These were the questions which they ask themselves, but in the sweep of events such questions are soon overwhelmed by more vital consideration. Hedda Hopper, Richard Tucker, Margaret Seddon, Cissy Fitzgerald, and Jean Lefferty are seen in the supporting cast. Byron Haskins directed.

WASHINGTON STEWART'S LETTER.

PUBLIC STILL FEARFUL IN AIR, AERONAUTICS' OFFICIAL FINDS

By Charles P. Stewart

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Way back in the days when folks were laughing over the first edition of Joe Miller's Joke Book this story was a mouldy old chestnut:

W.H. MacCRACKEN

"An aged darky was explaining why, though undaunted by the perils of railroad travel, he drew the line on water transportation.

"It had been pointed out to him that it hurt no worse to be drowned at sea than to be ground up ashore, and that the number of fatalities by the alternative mehtods didn't differ widely, if any.

"The venerable Ethiopian couldn't see it.

"'Kuh-smash goes yo' train,' he said, 'an' thah yo' is. Down goes yo' boat, an' what is you?'"

AN ancient chestnut!

Yet, according to the reasoning of William P. MacCracken, Jr., assistant secretary of commerce in charge of aeronautics, that old darky's frame of mind parallels the frame of mind of people who never turn a hair at the idea of careening over the landscape in a recklessly-run automobile, but blench at the thought of going up in a nice, safe plane, with a careful pilot in charge.

The darky didn't want to be mangled in a railroad wreck, but if it happened he could stand it. A land-lubber, drowning seemed to him like a strange, terrible kind of death, which he shuddered at.

An autoist's attuned to the dangers of the streets and highways. They don't perturb him. Aviation dangers are new to his mental processes. They give him the shivers.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF COMMERCE MacCRACKEN can't remember a time when automobiles weren't pretty numerous, but occasionally he meets some elderly individual who's still more or less leery of them.

He calculates that there must have been a stage of the game when they were quite generally regardd a safest to keep out of.

Just so with airplanes?

MacCracken reckons. He's aware that many persons are still afraid of aviation, though a goodly number who were afraid of it originally have outgrown their earlier nervousness now.

The aeronautics secretary believes the coming generation will regard flying as indifferently as the present one regards the auto.

MacCRACKEN had a chance to try out this theory recently, at an aviation show given by the commerce department in Washington.

Free rides were an important feature of the occasion.

The department's trying to popularize flying, and the officials' view was that folk who took sufficient interest in it, and had the nerve to go aloft, ought to be encouraged. So they weren't stingy about it.

But what attracted their attention was that the clamorous ones were nearly all very young—mere children.

THE oldsters hung back. With a few exceptions, they weren't at all willing to leave terra firma even in response to cordial invitations. When they did accept they gritted their teeth, and gave every indication of feeling that they were committing themselves to a desperate venture.

Little boys and girls climbed aboard and soared into the heavens as indifferently as the average citizen takes a street car.

"A new psychology" is Secretary MacCracken's diagnosis.

MacCRACKEN does, indeed, expect to see aviation develop and expand with the mechanical improvement of planes and the extension of flying facilities.

He expects still more, however, from an air-minded generation, now in its infancy.

Tours Ireland on Hands.

Claiming to be a Canadian and an ex-soldier, a man recently passed through Dundalk, Ireland, walking on his hands. He had come from Dublin and said he intended to proceed to Belfast on his digit-and-finger hike. His hands were encased in sandels, and he had with him a goat harnessed to a little four-wheeled cart, which contained a camping outfit and cooking utensils. He aroused so much interest in Dundalk that the Civic Guards had to be called out to regulate the traffic for more than two miles along the Newry Road.

Representatives of all golf clubs in the Musselburgh district of Scotland attended the funeral at Mihill recently of Robert Turnbull, golf professional of Nice and formerly of the Royal Copenhagen Golf club.

Heavy Track Expected To Increase Whitney Entry's Chances

Bostonian Is Latest Choice As Nags Face Barrier For Classic

Preferred by General Sentiment Although Rip Rap, Osmand, Rolled Stocking, Scapa Flow and Others, Mostly Mudders, are Also Given Play.

By Davis J. Walsh.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 14.—The top sergeant stands with watch in hand, noting the minutes, the seconds, and ever and anon he glances along the line to see that all is well. The starter watches the field with the eye of a basilisk and notes everything, not exclusive of the fact that Saxon is acting up, as usual; that Rip Rap won't face the barrier, that horses in general are a contrary contraption.

And ever and anon, as he glances along the line, he sees the horse that wants to go and the horse that would rather not have been there in the first place, and somehow must get them off. It is the zero hour and the start of the Kentucky Derby of a mile and a quarter.

That's it. The xero hour. And it will come this afternoon along about five o'clock when some eighteen of the ranking thoroughbreds the country over will dapple their way to the post in the fifty-third running of the Derby. This, as aid, is the fifty-third running, but derbies are derbies and the 1927 model is a felt hat.

For once, there is no outstanding candidate. One man likes Rip Rap, another cares dearly for Osmand, a third wants to sell you on Rolled Stocking. But the final test is the composite ballot and that shows that the general sentiment is for the Whitney entry.

The writer's opinion, which may be important in case that mucilage is palatable, is that Bostonian, winner of the Preakness, will repeat here, equalling the record of Sir Barton, the only horse to win both classics. For one reason, the track today figures to be heavier than the average conscience; for another, Bostonian can and will run a distance.

So much for experting, which as usual will pay off exactly ten cents on the dollar, provided you have the dollar. The expert never starts unless you have the dollar.

Somewhere in the neighborhood of 75,000 holding a dollar to the individual fist, will mill around in the confines of Churchill Downs for the privilege of saying: "I was there." This is very important, particularly in the billiard rooms at Fort Wayne, Ind., during the summer season.

Some of them will be there by heel and toeing their way to Churchill Downs, five miles distant; others will pay the large sum of seven cents by trolley; a third group will ride the springs of a delivery wagon and a fourth the cushions of high powered motor cars.

For this is the derby of derbies and the riff raff and the last of the Stuyvesants will be there. Rubbing elbows, borrowing matches and exchanging dirty looks. The Stuyvesants still can look very dirty with or without shave and a hair cut.

Post positions, of course, don't pay a nickel at the judges' stand or otherwise the boys who are paying $20 a night for hotel room and nothing a night for a park bench will have wasted their exceedingly important time. Still, the horse that breaks in front often wins the race.

Therefore, it may be noted with due appreciation that Rolled Stocking, liked by a lot of men who haven't looked further north than an ankle in years is No. 4. He is bounded by Buddy Bauer, who either starts fast or not at all, and Saxon, a horse who rushes to the front and then thinks better of it.

Hydromel, the chills and fever entry, is No. 7, followed by Black Panther and Whiskery. The former is a slow starter, the latter a fast horse off the mark, so that Hydromel and Whiskery should get away without interference.

Rip Rap and Bostonian are coupled at No. 13, and 14, insuring a fair start since Osmand is a fast breaker and Mr. Kirkwood only is in there for the exercise.

There isn't anything out there toward the far edge of the track except Fred Jr., and Scapa Flow, many betting rather critical money on his chances. Scapa, a fast breaker, is likely to cut off the rest at the pole and make the early pace but this event is not an early event. The finish, in fact, will be in front of the distant grandstand, a mile and a quarter away.

Further than that, it figures to be an event for mudders. Among the latter are Osmand, Bostonian, first and last but not in the race, Black Panther, Scapa Flow and Fred Jr.

FOUR IN ROW FOR NEWELL

Dailey's Nine Shuts Out Wellsville Club 2 to 0.

Wolf's wildness plus errors behind him caused the Nash Motors of Wellsville to lose out to Laughlin on Newell field last evening though they outhit the potters by more than three to one. Indeed, the victors made but two safe drives, while the losers garnered seven. Yet the former lost, 2 to 0.

Scoring occurred in but one inning, the third. Then miscues behind Wolf gave the West Virginians two runs and the game. Both sides previously and thereafter administered each other goose eggs regularly.

Ashe was given fine support by Laughlin. He himself fielded superbly. He accepted nine chances.

Rager and C. Coleman excelled in fielding. The former accepted four hard chances in left. He also hit safely in two of three efforts. The latter had a single and a triple while gathering in six of seven offerings in his territory.

THREE LOOP NINES STILL UNBEATEN

Heimies, Bulger Drugs and Laughlin, N., Win Two Apiece.

Heimies, Bulger Drugs and Laughlin, Newell, are undefeated as the first week of the Review-Tribune Recreation league comes to a close, each club boasting two victories and no defeats.

The Bulger Drugs last night won from the Review-Tribune in a fast game at Klondyke, the final count being 7 to 3.

The Drugs had one big inning, the seventh, in which they sent five runners across the plate to clinch the contest. With one run in and two men on the bases in the last half of the ninth, the Printers started a rally which, however, was nipped before the Drugs' lead could be overhauled.

The Printers scored first, crossing the pan in the opening frame, and added another tally in the third. The Drugs went scoreless until the fifth when they tied it up. In the seventh they bunched hits with a couple of defense errors to score the winning counters.

Johnny Green turned in a three base smack as one of the offensive features of the performance while Shortstop Alex Kidd's one-handed spear of a sizzling liner which he converted into a double put out marked the defensive play.

Ted Scheffer's Y. M. C. A. nine won their first league game when they pinned a 5 to 4 defeat on the Workingmen's Store club at Upper Columbian park. TURK NASH WINS FROM BILLIARDS

Winners Bunch Hits in Third to Clinch Contest.

Outhitting their opponents and making timely changes on the hilltop when the bases became clogged by reason of infield miscues Turk-Nash won from the American Billiards in a fast City Industrial league contest at Columbian park last evening, 7 to 3.

The contest had been transferred from Klondyke to Columbian park.

Both clubs scored in the first inning, a trio of errors contributing to Turk-Nash's tally in that period, while a walk, double and sacrifice fly enabled the Americans to get theirs.

The winners forged to the front in the third when Southpaw Baker was set upon for three runs and four hits. Then "Cracker" Howell succeeded him, unleashing his side-arm delivery and whipping over some wide curves. Before he could warm up to the situation two more runs resulted. In the succeeding three innings he allowed but one run. He retired his former comrades in a row, but six men facing him, in the final two batting chances of the automobile aggregation.

Springer, a likely looking youngster, started the flinging for Turk-Nash and did well until two men were down in the fourth. Three errors in that period plus a double made necessary his retirement to save the contest.

The game was featured by J. Watson's two doubles in succession, his last driving in two runs. He swatted .667 for the day. McConnell led his club in swatting with a double and two singles in four attempts, a .750 mark.

Deshler showed he could play first base as he understudied the versatile Bill Mundy.

Moore's playing at short stood out throughout the game. He accepted five chances without the suggestion of a slip-up. He hit hard twice though he failed to get the balls into safe territory.

CARDS CUT GIANT LEAD

Willie Sherdel Unsolvable and Red Birds Win 11 to 1.

By Les Conklin.

NEW YORK, May 14.—After going hitless in his last 36 times at bat, Al Tyson of the New York Giants has bolstered his dwindling batting average by collecting four consecutive singles in the final game of the Giant-Cardinal series. Tyson saved his job but failed to help the Giants, who were massacred by a score of 11 to 1 and now lead the Red Birds by only one game.

The Giants couldn't touch Wee Willie Sherdel and went to pieces in the field like a third-hand automobile, making five bobbles. Aroused by the sting of two defeats, the Cards knocked Fitzsimmons silly and scored seven runs in the first inning. Don Songer, obtained from Pittsburgh, made his debut in a New York uniform and twirled five scoreless innings.

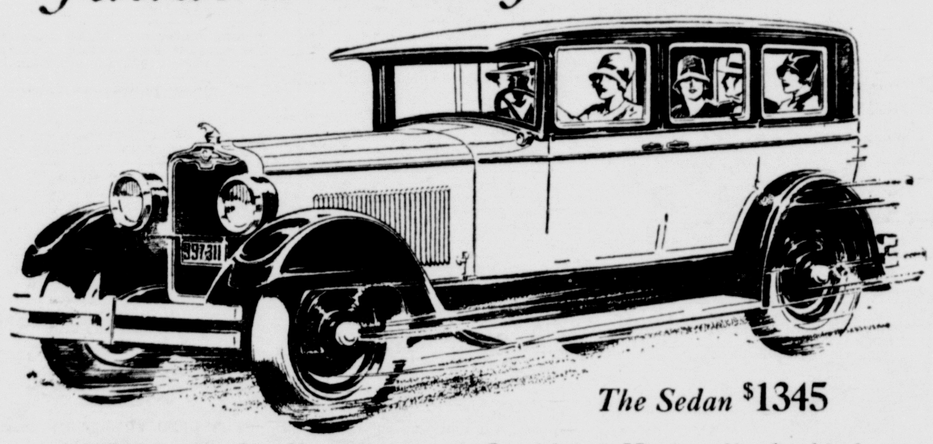
Trailing Cincinnati by four runs, the Brooklyn Dodgers staged a rousing five run rally in the eighth and won, 5 to 4. The Dodgers have won nine of their last twelve contests while the Reds have lost more games than the Boston Red Sox. As far as their pennant chances are concerned, the Porkville boys might just as well engage passage on that rocket which is to be sent to the moon from Worcester, Mass. in the near future.

Hoyt shaded Wingard in a pitchers' battle as the Yankees downed the Brown for the fourth straight time, 3 to 1. The Yanks increased their lead as the White Sox were idle.

Lundgren, Red Sox rokkie, may prove to be the Moses needed to lead the back bay boys out of the wilderness. After beating Detroit last week in his first start, he whitewashed Cleveland 11 to 0, yesterday, holding the Indians to three hits and five fouls.

Another three hit performance was turned in by Hub Pruett as the Phillies trimmed the Cubs, 4 to 1, and tied the Pirates for third place. The game was a home run orgy. Old Cy Williams contributed his sixth homer of the season, Jimmy Wilson also hit for the circuit and Fred Leach [illegible] e up the game with a homer in the eighth inning. A homer by Kaufmann of the Cubs stretched Chicago's home run record to eleven consecutive games.

Thousands acclaim this "Fundamentally better" Six



The Sedan $1345

THIS new Six-60 answers—unmistakably—the insistent demand for a low-priced car that is strictly quality through and through.

Just think of a car selling as low as $1295, with the quiet power, the freedom from vibration that only a 7-bearing crankshaft can give.

Think of it with the added smoothness of new type Nelson Bohnalite Pistons—the advantage of interchangeable Ring True Bearings—the ease of steering made possible by Ross cam and lever steering—the longer life and dependability of Timken bearings.

Add to these marked advantages, Lockheed Hydraulic 4-wheel brakes—wide, deep-cushioned, pillowy seats—long-lasting lacquer finish and a full score of other advanced features.

Then you'll realize what a marvel of satisfaction and mechanical efficiency this low-priced Six-60 really is.

But you must see it, too. For it's built low to the ground—with the graceful, flowing lines that denote quality and give that air of individuality we all appreciate so much.

So, see this "fundamentally better" Six and drive it. You'll find it everything you've always thought a Peerless must be.
